Make an Attractive Town

According to officers of the Jackson County Road Commission, the next thing in order for cities and villages on the trunk line roads will be comfort stations, says the Parma News. The plan is to build these stations of such scope as to accommodate picnic parties. A place will be provided where travelers can rest and eat lunch and where if necessary, lunch stands will be maintained, where meals can be bought at a reasonable price. Travel on the trunk line roads will be heavy and will steadily increase, reaching almost incredible proportions in a few years.

The building of comfort, rest and eating stations will add to the patronage, of the villages, and thousands of motorists will be attracted to Michigan every summer, making this state one of the leading summer playgrounds of America.

There is a state law requiring cities and villages to provide comfort stations and the law will be enforced, especially in towns on the trunk line highways.
