5% OF THE TIME, THE SAAB APC TURBO IS AS GOOD AS ANY OTHER TURBO ON THE ROAD. THE REST OF THE TIME, IT'S BETTER.

All modern turbos are designed to work well under the worst possible driving conditions. With low octane gas or on hot, dry vacation, for example.
The problem is that you encounter these conditions only about 5% of the time you're on the road. The other 95% of the time, conventional turbos can do little to exploit full potential.
The solution to this problem is the 1982 Saab Turbo with Automatic Performance Control. When conditions are normal (which is most of the time), APC automatically increases boost pressure. Resulting in a 10% increase in torque, an 11% increase in mileage and a 9-60 mph time that's a full second faster than an comparable turbo car in driving pleasure.
There's no question that building a turbo to stand up to potential problems is a challenge worthy of Saab.
But buying one that can live up to its full potential is even more rewarding.
The most intelligent car car built today.
*Saab 900 4 door Turbo. ① EPA estimated mpg. 23 estimated high way mpg. Remember, actual fuel figures for comparison only. Mileage will vary with speed, weather, and trip length. Actual highway mileage will be less than EPA estimated mpg. ② EPA estimated mpg. 34 estimated highway mpg. Highway based on comparison with 1982 Saab Turbo.
