
4-door Rolls

The first new four-door Rolls-Royce in 15 years has just been introduced. The Silver Spirit, slightly wider and lower than its predecessor, costs $109,000. This is the first year Rolls-Royce's bottom-of-the line car does not cost less than $100,000. The Silver Spirit is no longer so quiet that at 60 mph the only sound you hear is the electric clock ticking — the digital clock no longer ticks. The only Michigan dealer for Rolls-Royce is Estate Motors in Birmingham.

Your habits, maintenance determine car's mileage

The driver controls the prime factors that determine how much gasoline he uses.

A well-tuned, properly maintained car will deliver the maximum mileage of which it's capable. The easiest and best way to make sure a car is mechanically able to give its owner the best possible mileage is to follow the recommended maintenance schedule in the car's owner manual.

• Spark plugs should be clean, properly gapped and firing efficiently. Plugs that misfire only 2 percent of the time — a rate that most drivers don't notice — can harm fuel economy.

• The carburetor should be adjusted to manufacturer's specifications. A dirty or faulty carburetor or a sticking automatic choke wastes gasoline and contributes to air pollution.

• Tires that are underinflated increase rolling resistance. This requires more fuel to move the car.

• The air cleaner should be clean and checked frequently, especially if you drive dusty roads. A dirty air cleaner restricts the flow of air to the carburetor and causes the engine to run on a higher- than-normal ratio of fuel to air.

• The thermostat in the cooling system should be functioning properly. A faulty or improper thermostat can waste gasoline by prolonging engine warmup in cold weather.

Once your car is tuned and properly maintained, how you drive probably has the greatest influence on the amount of fuel you use. Usually, it's a simple matter of consciously thinking "fuel economy" when you drive.

• Slow down. Don't drive much faster than the bottom of each gear range.

• Avoid long periods of idling, such as waiting in a drive-in line. If you're in for a long wait at a train crossing or are waiting for a passenger, turn off the engine — when you're idling, you're getting zero miles per gallon.

• Look ahead and anticipate signal changes. Slow down to make the green rather than stop for a red light.

• Try to avoid streets with lots of traffic lights and/or stop signs.

• Avoid jack-rabbit starts. They're murder on gasoline mileage.

• Maintain an even speed, especially on freeways.

• Coast to a stop whenever possible. Sudden stops waste gasoline.

• Be sure the parking brake is fully released before pulling away.

• Don't ride the brake or clutch pedal or pump the accelerator pedal.

• Cut down the load. Store golf clubs or camping gear at home, not in the trunk of your car.

• Organize your trips. Chances are, you can make one trip and do the things that usually take two.
