One of the things most people do when they look at a used car is kick the tires. But it won't tell them a thing. It won't tell them, for instance, that the car has passed a rigid safety and performance test. Or that it has been completely reconditioned, tuned up, tightened up, washed and polished inside and out. Come in and kick the tires, slam the doors, bounce up and down on the upholstery, if you like. Then go out for a spin. We sell more VWs that way. We sort of get a kick out of it.
