In the early 1980s on an athletic scholarship, Emin studied architecture at Lawrence Technological University in Southfield, but found it too analytical, too restrictive. Classes in art and printmaking with Robert DuFour at Schoolcraft College in Livonia brought him closer to finding his dream. The art studies inspired him to create gouache paintings of models' pictures torn from magazines.

Emin has the ability to evaluate a model's potential for success, then create a personalized book geared for the competitive world of modeling.

Of late he has become somewhat of a celebrity appearing on Kelly & Co. in a segment on makeovers.

"I'm obsessed with my work. I'm in love with what I do. Whatever I can do to make someone look good makes me look good."

■ 'I'm in love with what I do.'
