REMEMBER THOSE GOOD OLD DAYS.

We can all look back on the past and probably remember the "good old days." Reflecting on our past helps us to become a better person when dealing with the future. As we think of past experiences or events, we usually remember more good things than bad about the past. For example, a mother may remember the joy of hearing her baby's first cry more than the travail of childbirth; or the war veteran who talks about the good old days in the armed forces and neglects to mention the hardships. I believe this is God's way of helping us to cope with life. God wants us to be fulfilled and content in this life, and not dwelling on unpleasant memories helps us to achieve this. An old person may lose some of his short-term memory, but can usually still talk about those good old days fifty years ago. God loves and cares for us, and we should remember that today may be our "good old days" in the future.
