'Laughter is our gift to America'

Irish show relates to Ireland and U.S. friendship

BY LANA MINI
STAFF WRITER

He didn't mean to sound gushy and sentimental toward the U.S., he said.

But Noel V. Ginnity remembers his childhood days, 50 years ago, when all the money and clothing he owned came from relatives in America.

"Ireland was a dark world, even our clothing was dark," Ginnity said. "And then relatives from Ireland went to work in America and sent us colorful clothing. We survived because of America."

Ginnity is now a popular Dublin comedian and spends much of his time in the U.S. with his show Dublin Irish Cabaret coming to the Ford Community & Performing Arts Center in Dearborn Friday, March 7.

It's a lively blend of traditional Irish music and folk dance. The show features tenor Andy Cooney and musicians Tommy Keane, Pat Marnane and Seamus Bret. There's also a Riverdance tribute.

During a telephone interview from his Dublin home, Ginnity said to expect everything Irish at the pre-St. Patrick's Day event - accordions and flutes, beloved Irish ballads and dance.

And, of course, humor.

As "an Ambassador of Laughter" for Ireland, Ginnity blends comedy, music and storytelling.

His comedie style is about humorous Irish tales - a far contrast from comedians of today whose humor revolves around everyday life incidents.

It's Irish humor that Ginnity said Americans appreciate.

"It's clean family fun," the comedian said.

Ginnity, an native of Ireland, performed at the original Doyle's Irish Cabaret in Dublin every night, six months a year, for 23 years.

Funnyman Noel V. Ginnity of Ireland will tell humorous Irish tales at "Dublin Irish Cabaret."

AT A GLANCE

What: Dublin Irish Cabaret - traditional Irish entertainment including Irish soloist Catherine Coates and comedian Noel Ginnity plus a tribute to Riverdance, and Irish folk music and dance.
When: 8 p.m. Friday, March 7.
Where: The Ford Community and Performing Arts Center, 15801 Michigan Ave. at Greenfield, Dearborn.
Cost: $25-30, (313) 943-2350, www.dearbornfordcenter.com

WHACKY

One of the last comics whose style represents classic vaudevillians, Ginnity performs in whacky clothing – pointy Irish bicycle shoes painted bright red and feathered hats and bold patterned shirts.

The love affair between Ireland and the U.S. helps his career.

"People see Ireland as a mystical place," he said. "And the way Ireland feels about America, well it's nearer to Boston than it is to Brussels, and the show embraces those good feelings."

His pro-American emotion is unique in these times when much of the world has anti-American sentiment. But what does that have to do with Dublin Irish Cabaret?

A lot, he said.

Historically, people go to comic shows during difficult times.

"There's a whole lowering of standards and etiquette that I just don't subscribe to," he said. "This show is fun for people no matter what the age because I love to hear belly-rolling laughter.

"Today, the first test tube baby was born in Ireland ... in a tiny pub from a bottle of Guinness with a big fluffy head."

That's Ginnity's humor that's taken him and several musicians in Dublin Cabaret on tours throughout the U.S. He's just finished a tour on Florida cruise ships and soon will spend months in Dollywood – Dolly Parton's theme park in Gatlinburg, Tenn.

"It's a wonderful compliment to go to Dollywood because Ireland loves her."

Ginnity survived his teenage years with a height of just 5-foot-2-inches by making people laugh. When you're small, he said, you compensate in other ways. "I did by being the funniest guy in school.

"Now I make people laugh because I love to. It makes me happy to hear an audience filled with joy."
