CALLS TELEPHONE BOON FOR AMERICAN PEOPLE

Review of Reviews Editor Says Private Enterprise Has Made Service Efficient, Cheap

No other service of any kind in the world gives so much human satisfaction and so much sheer monetary value for the amount paid by the user as the telephone, declares Albert Shaw, Editor of the Review of Reviews Magazine.

In a recent issue of the magazine, under a caption, "Most Service for Least Money," Mr. Shaw declares that, while no other country is so well served by local and long distance exchanges as is the United States, the whole world is now rapidly learning to use the telephone. He adds:

"To make the telephone a government enterprise would be a calamity. The Government could not possibly render anything like the service we now have for the prices we now pay to the great telephone organization. . . . The important thing for the public is to encourage the dynamic quality of the telephone system, in order that there may be no check upon its further expansion. There is no single public convenience in America that affords so much help in emergencies, and saves so much time and trouble in the ordinary course of life, as the 'nickel-in-the-slot' telephone booths that one finds by the million throughout America.

"To maintain this service at the present rate of charges is to give the public something that rich and poor enjoy in common. Nothing else is purchasable for five cents that can for a moment be compared, in value of the intrinsic sort, with this five-cent telephone service."
