Heat in Polar Regions

During about a month in summer the polar regions receive as much heat as does the equator.

Wildcat Takes Bath

Wildcats, like their domestic cousins, dislike the water, but if forced to make an escape from an enemy they will plunge in and swim as well as any animal, according to a writer in Boys' Life, the monthly magazine of the Boy Scouts of America. A wildcat was treed by dogs recently, says he, and it jumped into the nearby river to escape, and by swimming rapidly across the river eluded his tormentors.
