Old Grecian Phrase

"The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small," is an old Greek aphorism which was put in its present form by Friedrich Logau, a German epigrammatist, whose works were translated by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Vain Monarch

King Henry VIII, who was proud of his own broad shoulders, set the fashion of padding the shoulders of garments to accentuate the breadth. This is indicated in the many portraits of him by Holbein.

"No Such Animal"

It is not true that at some period in the dim past there were animals in hilly countries which had legs on one side longer than on the other. The biological survey says that there never has been such an animal.
