answer obviously must come from the voters in November, 1950.

One wise-cracking newspaper reporter recently observed at the capitol: "What Williams needs in 1950 is another Kim Sigler."

Williams believes he has everything he needs to win. He is confident, to say the least.

Bills adopted by the legislature include the following:

Fishermen can catch panfish of any size. The conservation director may designate which waters may be fished for rainbows in the fall.

Campers on state land must get free permits and must clean up the grounds before leaving.

Old age welfare (assistance) maximum benefits are increased from $50 to $60 monthly.

Salaries of circuit court judges increased $2,000 a year.

Agricultural inspection fees transferred to general fund.

Adjustment in fees and salaries for probate judges, jurors, township officials and many others.

Workmen's compensation payments raised.

"Loopholes" in state sales tax act are plugged for better revenue collection.
