New Group Opposes Wayne Millage Levy

In what may be a battle of the initial groups, a homeowners association has organized to oppose the four-mill school levy on the Sept. 12 ballot for Westland voters in the Wayne Community School District.

The new group is Homeowners Association for Lowering Taxes (HALT), which is on the opposite side of the millage issue from Voters for Total Education (VOTE) which spearheaded a petition drive recently to force the special election.

In its first public statements, the HALT officers asked several pointed questions about what plans the school board has for new income from higher tax base in Westland.

Although HALT feels that it favors first class education, "we find there is much waste in the spending habits of our administration. There comes a time when someone has to be a watch-dog for the spending spree that this administration has undertaken."

Some of the questions the group is asking include:

"What does the administration plan on doing with the $340,000 in extra income from the Westland Shopping Center?"

"What does the administration plan on doing with the $840,000 in excess revenue it will have this year from higher assessments and new industries?"

"What does the administration plan on doing with the $410,000 it will receive from Public Act 409 which will take effect next December?"

The group also deplored the "scare" tactics used by the administration and claimed that the Sept. 12 special election is illegal because of the method in which the petitions were circulated.

However, George Pappas of the VOTE group said the petitions matter was checked and approved by the state attorney general's office before they were circulated.

The HALT committee also said in its first public statement that based on the information they have obtained, it will "say no until the administration can convince us otherwise."

The group is willing to listen and find out what the district is planning to do with the four mills if the proposal is approved next month.

Wayne's school board originally announced a series of educational and sports program cuts when the millage question was defeated at the June 13 election but some of the reductions were restored a month later with the remainder to depend on the outcome of the Sept. 12 millage vote.
