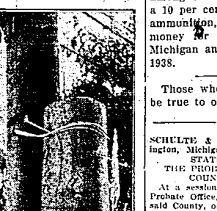
Dispossess Notice Not Served on Wren Family



Mother wren at entrance to home in section of old telephone pole which was lashed to new pole so her family might not be disturbed.

When a telephone construction crew erected a new pole in Pittsfield, Mass., to replace one which had become decayed, they found, after the new pole had been set in place close to the old one, that a family of wrens—three of them fuzzy babes—was keeping house in the old pole. Anxious not to disturb the housekeeping arrangements, the telephone men lashed a section of the old pole, about four feet long and containing the nest, securely to the new pole. The top and bottom of the old pole were cut away, leaving the wrens home where it had been. Not until the young wrens were able to take care of themselves was the section of the old pole unlashed from its support and taken away.

COAL MINED SINCE 1835

Coal has been mined in Michigan since about 1835. The earliest workings on record were at Jackson, Jackson county, and at Grand Ledge, Eaton county.

Say you saw it in the Enterprise

The Pittman-Robertson act, under which congress apportions among the states the proceeds of a 10 per cent tax on firearms and ammunition, has supplied federal money for wildlife restoration in Michigan annually, beginning with 1938.

Those who are true to God will be true to others.

Probably more than half the food of the 1,400 species and varieties of North American birds consists of insects, according to a report of the federal fish and wildlife service. Birds' high rate of energy consumption gives them an impressive insect eating capacity.
