MICHIGAN AUTHORITIES ABRAIGNED

United States Judge Tuttle's arraignment of the state authorities and also the authorities of Saginaw county in granting the Pere Marquette railroad an injunction against its striking showmen was warranted by the lawless condition which prevailed since the company endeavored to keep its shows in that city going. Judge Tuttle did not mince words in calling down Gov. Grosbeck and the Saginaw sheriff for not putting down the rioting, or even making an effort to preserve the order. There are 50 United States marshals on the ground now with instructions from the judge to enforce the injunction, and the strikers will be taught a lesson if they violate it.

True, the strikers at Saginaw didn't kill any of the non-union showmen, but it was probably more by good luck than any feeling of restraint on the part of the rioters. The attitude of the state and county authorities resembles suspiciously that displayed by the Illinois authorities in the coal mine massacre. If strikers are to be given full license murder is the natural outcome. Despite the hypocritical pronouncements of union leaders that they do not countenance violence when defeat stares them in the face, it is win "by foul means if we cannot by fair."

The government at Washington has not set a very good example by inviting the Illinois union men to a conference on the coal strike. What the Illinois miners need is to be taught that they cannot defy civilized law. The least President Harding could have done in his attempt to settle the coal strike was to have notified the Illinois union leaders that they were outlaws and could receive no consideration at the hands of the government. Michigan Investor still believes that every dollar in the Illinois coal mining district deserves deportation and they should be sent to their own country. There is no place for them in the United States.—Michigan Investor.

Publicity Aided Expansion of Tuberculosis Campaign

When extensive campaigns against tuberculosis of cattle were launched many persons interested in the dairy business predicted that giving publicity to such conditions would alarm the consumer and reduce the consumption of milk and dairy products. But instead of producing this result, says the United States department of agriculture, the increasing efforts to improve the health of herds have inspired more faith in the safety and value of foods from the dairy cow. Hundreds of towns have made tuberculosis regulations to provide for clean herds and to make milk wholesome and publicity has been given to the various kinds of work being done by cities, counties, states and the department of agriculture. As a result of this work to improve the health of the dairy cow, statistics show that the number of cows has increased and the consumption of milk is greater than ever before.

In recent months the most encouraging development in the work of eradication of this great cattle disease has been the number of counties that have made a complete clean-up of the herds on every farm. This area work is demonstrating that complete eradication is not a dream but a practical possibility. The expense will be paid for by more efficient herds and better products.

Returned for Road Making

The first shipment of surplus war material used by the American army of occupation in Germany and now to be distributed among the state for use in road construction arrived at Brookfield, N. Y., July 1. The equipment, consisting of 30 trucks, 7 tractors, 4 concrete mixers and 3 road rollers, will be distributed by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture in the same way as several millions dollars worth of materials from France and the arsenals and camps in this country. Additional material for road making to be shipped from Germany will consist of several hundred trucks, a number of tractors, and about 2,000,000 pounds of spare parts for trucks.

Spencer in The Field For Registry Job

Arthur W. Spencer, of Rochester, for seven years supervisor of Acon Township, today announced that he would be a candidate for the Republican nomination as registrar of deeds at the September primary.

In announcing himself, Mr. Spencer said: "I consider that a public official is a public servant, and that it is incumbent upon him to render to the public the expected services, quickly, courteously, and with the minimum of expense to the public compatible with efficiency.—Adv. 291f

Seen In "The Awakening"

"The 15,000 spectators who nightly visit "The Awakening," which opens in Detroit on July 21st for a two weeks' run, will not only witness a giant cast of 600 people, but they will be entertained by the most highly trained troupe of interpretative dancers in America: the Gladys Hight ballet of the Chicago Opera Company. Assisting the Hight troupe will be 200 other dancers recruited from Detroit's most skilled students of the dancing schools. The Detroit dancers have for weeks been under training with Lucile La Verne, premiere danseuse of Chicago, preparing for this mammoth spectacle.

At 8:15 each evening the great show will open with a balloon ascension.

Gladys Hight Ballerina Assoluta, Director of the Celebrated Hight Interpretative Ballet

From the center of the amphitheatre, and immediately following will be shown 12 of the highest class circus acts in America, including clowns, acrobats, equestrians, equilibrists, trained animals, wire walkers, and followed by the world-famous Hight ballet performing on a specially built glass stage showing wonderful pyrotechnic effects. Six large stages are required to present these acts, plus a race track and an artificial lake.

"The Last Days of Pompeii," revived and presented under the personal direction of Henry J. Pain, its originator, on a scale of magnificence never before attempted. The second section of the great spectacle. Dances, religious rites, street parades, mob scenes, all are included in this masterpiece of stage-craft and electro-chemical wizardry. The spectacle of Vesuvius and the destruction of the beautiful city of Pompeii with its thousands of people in the midst of their holiday ceremonies offers a degree of realism never achieved in any other production.

The third mammoth section of the show is made up of Pain's "Manhattan Bosch" fireworks known to those who have seen it to the days before the late war, as the most magnificent pyrotechnic spectacle ever presented. "At each performance a Haynes automobile will be presented to some person in the audience, and on opening night, July 24th, two Haynes cars will be given away. The grounds occupied by "The Awakening" occupy 40 acres at Dexter boulevard and Davison avenue, and are reached by Hamilton and Trumbull cars. Tickets may be had at Grinnell Bros. music store, 1515 Woodward avenue, Detroit.

With Grotto Spectacle

Forty acres of ground, seats for 15,000 spectators and a cast of 2,000 entertainers are required for "The Awakening," the mammoth spectacle which Shadrigham Grotto will stage at Dexter boulevard and Davison avenue, Detroit, for two weeks starting July 21st. "The most mammoth entertainment ever shown in the Middle West" is the verdict of Director George Heskyus, internationally known as a director and producer of large spectacles.

In the circus are 12 headline acts, the Jordan sisters being the premier wire walkers of the great entertainment. There will also be an army of clowns fast running horses ridden by daring men and beautiful ladies.

The Detroit Street Railway is installing special loops and spur tracks for the use of the Trumbull and Hamilton cars, the two lines which reach the Grotto stadium, at the Detroit Edison Co. is setting 40 poles to carry high tension wires for the illumination of the great arena.

"The Last Days of Pompeii" and Pain's "Manhattan Bosch" fireworks will both be presented under the personal direction of Henry J. Pain, their originator, and Mr. Pain states that this Detroit spectacle is the most mammoth he has ever undertaken.

Every evening during the entire length of the show a Haynes automobile will be presented to some person in the audience and on the opening night, July 24th, two Haynes cars will be given away. Advance sale of tickets is being held at Grinnell Bros. music store, 1515 Woodward avenue Detroit.

Siamese Fighting Fish

The government of Siam realizes a considerable revenue from fish-sighting by licensed exhibitions where fish are matched against each other at sporting events. The fighting fish are found in the waters near there, and while not large, they are ferocious and fight to the death.

Mystery, love and adventure in the land of Creole delight!

The Mardi Gras Mystery

By H. BEDFORD JONES

If you love dear, old New Orleans—and who that has ever spent much time there does not—you have a treat before you in this story; for in addition to a pleasing, pulse-quickenning romance which introduces the gayeties of Mardi Gras and the most charming characteristics of a people of Latin descent, you are taken into the inner life of the modern city.

You see a city which has changed in outward form with the times, and its aristocracy in lineal descent from chivaliers of France and dons of Spain, one might almost say princes of the blood, graduated into merchant princes and men high in the professions—the proud, boastful, loveable Creoles—a man of affairs.

The author has written an enchanting tale which we take unusual pleasure in reprinting as a serial for the reader of

HIKING DOWN THE LONG BROWN PATH

Vacationists With Shelter Tents and Tin Cow Learning to Walk All Over Again.

Oh! It's not the pack that you carry on your back. Nor the tin on your shoulder. Nor the five inch crust of khaki-colored. That makes you feel your limbs are And it's not the hike on the hard (surprise) trail any more. Nor the spooks of steers that raise the hair on your neck. It's the long mile.

Stringing out from the suburban transit terminals of New York every Sunday and holiday goes the army of hickling hikers. There may be an automobile for every twang of the country's population, but a host of city folks disprove the theory of a future leg-enfeebled citizenry and are learning to walk all over again.

To the more casual minded, the hike is just exercise, but to those who catch its real significance, the hike means a great deal more. It is the cheapest form of recreation and therefore appeals to those living in crowded districts and unable to avail themselves of the more expensive amusements. And these people, be it noted, are just those the country is so anxious to have spread out and settled in the rural sections. The hike, indeed, has possibilities as a real starter for the "back to the farm" movement.

Doughboy and Boy Scout Lead Way

Just a brief survey of the rollicking groups which move off from the outlying terminals on holidays establishes a few general types. There is the ex-serviceman and his friends who will hear from him; the story of more serious excursions on the muddy roads of France. He tightens a strap here and another there on the blanket roll adjustment or the "shelter half," in which the commissary is packed for the mid-day feast by the roadside. Expert directions come from him on the subject of slinging the pack so it will not feel so heavy or interfere with the free body movement. He will pass along the information, gained in his army days, of how that same pack was evolved after numerous experiments to find the easiest way of carrying the heaviest load. With results he now compliments, but which he characterized when a doughboy as a "blankety blank total failure."

Then there are the boy scout parties, adept at everything pertaining to "shank mare" traveling and woodcraft. The ex-serviceman and the boy scout are hewers in the hiking game. Listen to one of them right off the train and making ready for a twelve mile jaunt. "Get that, canteen over the side. Jimmie, and it won't keep bouncing off you for every step. Is it fitted? Well, then, we drink. How about the cats? Let's check 'em off. You got the spuds, Bill; the bacon Jimmie, who has the coffee and the Jordan stew."

"Hight here," announces a freckled comrade of the road, patting his knapsack. "Salted the morks and the can of milk when Sis was looking." "Well, then, let's eat," snaps the commander of the expedition. This party is traveling light for real distance. Another must expect to make a shorter hitch or else the countenance is greatly on its power of endurance. Perhaps the camp is not far off because the group is equipped for an over-night stay with heavy blanket rolls, hatches, lanterns, tin cups, cups, rubber pongos, kettles, pans, new fangled firestays, etc. etc. The blankets are laid out for a better packing of the bags and cans of food. When the party commences to head up the members bristle all over with camp to-be-and equipment.

Back to the Farm

The veteran from the crowded city tenements has found a new territory to roam and new almost unknown to his associates. He is introducing them to this newly discovered land and teaching them how to be independent of any transportation but their own good legs and of any assistance but what they can carry and prepare. "Walk and cook your own," is his motto. Who will say the leather ties fermenting in the city crowds will not bear fruit in a keener appreciation of country delights, especially as these are added to by increased comforts on the farm. With the radio hitched on the farmer listens in on the best entertainment the country has to offer. Modern home devices wipe out many hardships formerly imposed upon isolated dwellers. This is in short, a rapid cutting down of the differential between farm and city life.

In the meantime, knowledge must precede a true appreciation of what the country holds, and this is what the hike supplies. There is more appeal in one apple tree in blossom than in dozens of potted plants set out to induce the citizen of the city to change his abode to the country. The hikers constitute a growing army, equipped with bacon, spuds, coffee and tin cow for every day's outing, but nevertheless seeing sights that make them yearn to be among them all the time. It is too much to assume that the soldier may one day recruit the open air.
