Homicide Cases in Oakland County

The trials of the cases of the People vs. William Reed and People vs Saint Helm in the circuit court last week, in which the former was convicted of murder in the first degree, and was sehtenced to Marquette prison for life, and the latter being convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to a term of from 7½ to 15 years to the same place, call attention to the fact that this is the first time in the history of Oakland county in which two separate and distinct homicide cases have been tried in the same week. In both of the above cases the people were represented by assistant prosecuting attorney, A. Floyd Blakeslee, and the defendants by Charles S. Matthews.

While the litigation has greatly increased during the last few years in Oakland county, with its increased industrial growth, there likewise has been an alarming increase in crimes that usually obtains with its heterogensous population in industrial centers like Oakland county.

During the year that Judge K. P. Rockwell has occupied the circuit bench, there have been more homicide cases disposed of in the circuit court than there was during the preceding quarter of a century. The first jury case which was tried during the regime of Judge Rockwell as circuit judge, was the People vs. Allan Livingstone, who was convicted of the murder of Irene Alexander, and was sentenced to Marquette prison for life. The next was the case of the People vs. William Griswold, convicted of assault with intent to commit the crime of murder, and sentenced to Ionia for a term of 12½ to 25 years. During the spring of 1918 Frank Paroski was apprehended for the murder of Theodore Radtke in Troy township, and was tried shortly after, and convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment at Marquette.

The case of the People vs. Hellmuth Schmidt, Oakland county's bluebeard, would have been the next to have had the attention of the circuit court had he not committed suicide in his cell before being brought to trial. The case of the People vs. Benjamin Hondrt, of Ortonville, charged with the murder of Ellsworth Narrin, attracted great attention in the northern part of the county. Honert being convicted of manslaughter, and is now serving a term in Jackson of from 7½ to 15 years.

During the fall of 1918 Antonio Norrito was arrested and put on trial in the circuit court, charged with the attempt to murder a citizen of Rochester, but the defendant exhibited signs of temporary insanity and was committed to the asylum for the insane at Ionia, to be returned for trial as soon as he recovers his mental faculties.

The case of the People vs. William Reed, colored, charged with the murder of Gregor Pioran and the People vs. Saint Helm, colored, charged with the murder of William Tanks, were both tried last week, occupying the court during the entire week. In addition to the cases disposed of, there are now awaiting trial the cases of People vs. William Cooper and Henry Gillan, charged with being an accomplice of William Reed in the attempted robbery of a pool room at which time Pioran was killed. Another case which will be tried next week is that of People vs. George Natchoff, charged with attempt to murder Peter Gordonoff, the crime alleged to have been committed during November of last year. Aside from the homicide cases in which the guilty parties have been apprehended, there are in addition, a number of baffling murder mysteries in Oakland county upon which the Oakland county authorities are still working.
