Farm Population Is Lowest in 20 Years

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture announced that the farm population was now the smallest in 20 years, with 27,511,000 on the farms on January 1, compared with a peak of 30,000,000 in 1920.

The bureau's estimate also shows a decrease in farm population during the last year despite improved agricultural conditions and a slight slackening in industrial employment, the January 1, 1929, figure comparing with a farm population of 27,699,000 persons on January 1, 1928.

The decrease in farm population in the last year would have been much greater were it not offset by an excess or births over deaths, the figures revealing that in the movement of population from and to farms, 1,560,000 persons left farms during the year and 1,362,000 persons moved from cities to farms.

The movement away from farms slowed up somewhat during the year compared with immediately preceding years, but the movement from cities to farms also was smaller. Thus it is shown that 1,960,000 persons left farms during the last year, compared with 1,976,000 in 1927, and with 2,155,000 in 1926. The movement from cities to farms was 1,326,000 persons last year, 1,374,000 in 1927 and 1,135,000 in 1926.

The large farm birth rate of twenty-three births per 1,000 persons and small death rate of eight deaths per 1,000 persons has been a big factor offsetting the farm-to-city movement, so that the net loss of farm population last year was 288,000 persons, compared with 393,000 in 1927 and with 649,000 in 1926.

Roman Relics in London

Excavations on an unprecedented scale being made in the city of London for new buildings are leading to remarkable discoveries of Roman and medieval remains.

A pair of antlers found in an excellent state of preservation indicate that the Romans used to have good hunting near the city, and, with other objects found, throw a vivid light on the London of 2,000 years ago. Among the objects discovered are relics of artistry such as the Roman equivalents of the lipstick, various pottery, shoes, and jewelry.

Many Kinds of Insects

In a recent statement in one of the new insect books it is said that more than 75 per cent of all the animal kinds belong to the phylum Arthropoda and more than 9 per cent of these are true insects. The estimated number of living species of insects which have been described is 625,000. This will give our readers some idea of the enormity of the study of entomology. The phylum Arthropoda is, as stated, the largest phylum in the animal kingdom, and aside from the vertebrates, of most importance to man.

Man Married Grandmother

Marriage of a grandson and his grandmother has just been reported from a village near Swole, in the Province of Overijssel, Holland. This is how it happened: A man married a girl of twenty, whose mother was forty-five. By his first marriage this man had had a son and this son married the mother of his father's second wife. Relatives figure out that the youth not only married his stepmother, but became stepfather to his own father.

MANY VISIT TOWERS

Over twelve thousand people visited the fire towers in Michigan last year, and in spite of the slightly precarious climb by means of an unguarded steel ladder, mounted to the tops. This number represents only those who reached the "crows' nests" and signed the tower register. Many more were satisfied to observe from the ground. These fire towers are serving as one of the best means of cautioning the public against the danger of fires, according to the forest fire division of the conservation department which has control over one hundred and forty towers located on strategic positions throughout the state.

WARN AGAINST FIRES

A warning to berry-pickers to be extremely careful with fires in the woods, as the season continues to be dry, has been issued by the forest fire division of the conservation department. Campfires should be extinguished before leaving, and there is always danger from carelessly thrown matches or smoking material.
