Handwriting reflects interest in changing medical ideas

Dear Mrs. Green,
I have followed your column in the newspaper for quite sometime. Hope you will find my handwriting interesting enough to analyze.
I am a nurse. I have always held the traditional beliefs, but now find myself interested in holistic health, acupuncture, and other changing concepts of medicine.
S. R. Detroit
Dear S.R.
Yes, I do find your handwriting very interesting, and I would also find you most interesting should we ever have the chance to meet.
It is not difficult for me to understand your interest in the changing concepts of medicine. You are an independent person, one who is not bound by tradition, but open to new ideas. You are objective and often impartial. Once you have made up your mind though you are a bit firm in your opinions. (Your lack of lead-in strokes, vertical slant, some short stems and some closed e's reveal this.)

You are probably a good nurse as you do not allow yourself to become too emotionally involved with your patients. You can be dominant and even assertive when you find it necessary. I get an impression that all the details, perhaps the paper work, involved in the nursing profession may be a bit irritating to you.
You enjoy a good discussion and words probably come easy for you. Often they are quite candid.

Efficient by nature, you tend to use your time wisely. But you can often find ways to shortcut the job. Eliminating the extraneous comes naturally for you.
You are not a wasteful person. When you share your time or talent with others it is after careful consideration. You do not jump into situations impulsively.
You are a practical, down-to-earth person and may get a little annoyed with those who are not.

Sometimes you tend to feel unappreciated and would enjoy hearing some positive feedback. However, you do not let this get you down.
It appears that you were raised in a mother-dominated home. Although the influence of neither parent seems particularly strong, your writing does suggest some cultural exposure (shape of your personal pronoun I, margin spacing and Greek e's.

If you have a question about your handwriting, please write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Use a full sheet of white unlined paper and write in the first person singular using black or blue ink. Time only allows Mrs. Green to answer your letters through the newspaper.
