Woman escapes late-night assailant

A 66-year-old woman from Farmington Hills escaped serious injury on Wednesday evening when her car lurched into reverse as her attacker tried to enter.

Farmington Police said the woman was getting into her car after bowling at Farmington Lanes when a man pushed her face down with his hand over her mouth and ordered her to move to the passenger side of the front seat.

The incident occurred around 11:30 p.m. on the east side of Taylor Pharmacy, 32316 Grand River, across from the bowling alley.

The woman struggled with her assailant by holding on to the steering wheel and blowing the horn to attract attention. She told police the man shut off the car's headlights and kicked her left leg which was still on the brake with the car in reverse.

The woman's foot slid off the brake and with the car idling fast and its wheels turned, the car lurched backward causing the man to jump out of the way. According to police, the woman said the man was "half-in, half-out of the car."

The suspect fled in an unknown direction, police said, and the badly bruised woman was unable to give a detailed description of him. She told police he appeared to be white, in his early 20s with dark hair.
