Buddy Poppy sale drive on Thursday

Members of the Farmington Hills Post 190 of the American Legion will be selling "Buddy Poppys" on Thurs-day, May 14. Veterans and their family members participate in this annual program to remember their buddies and raise funds for their welfare pro-grams.

All poppies sold by the American Le-gion are handmade by disabled veter-ans who are hospitalized. The Ameri-can Legion pays these disabled vets for their work. Proceeds donated by the public are expended only for the au-thorized welfare programs for the dis-abled and needy.

ing the former Governor Warner Man-sion.

Best Foot Forward

HEEL SPURS
On the heel bone, a spurlike growth of calcium sometimes forms where the muscles and ligaments of the foot attach. One or more spurs grow on the heel bone, but padded by the flesh of the foot, so that the spur may take years to become a problem. The painful heel spur hurts when you place your weight on the bone. Anyone may be affected. Women are as likely to suffer from it as men. It is seen most often in persons past forty, and the condition may be associated with arthritis or poor circulation. The underlying cause is chronic foot strain brought on by weak feet, prolonged standing, improper footwear, or structural misalignment of the feet. In each case, the feet are inadequate to the tasks they must perform and strain brings on physiological change with overgrowth of calcification. The pain comes actually not from the spur point but from the inflammation around the muscles where they attach to the bone. It is most severe when you start to walk after a rest. For full relief of painful heel spurs, your podiatrist will diagnose and analyze the problem and recommend a course of treatment. Foot surgery for heel spur removal is the most permanent procedure. Orthotics designed by the doctor also help. They float the spur in air without allowing it to bear weight when you step down on them in your shoes. The body weight is transferred forward from the tender heel. Since heel spurs can be extremely painful, they should not be accepted as part of everyday living. They can be removed or relieved with no discomfort, and relatively quickly by a podiatrist having the necessary skills.
