Public Telephones—for your convenience

The telephone has a public importance all its own, for nothing else can take its place. That fact puts a special obligation on this Company to see that, so far as possible, telephone service in Michigan is available to anyone, at any time.

That accounts for the public telephone.

The public telephone serves the traveling public. It serves those who want to place calls when away from home or office. It serves those who have no telephone of their own.

Throughout Michigan . . . in city, town and country . . . this Company maintains 19,777 public telephones. They are an important factor in providing telephone service for all.
