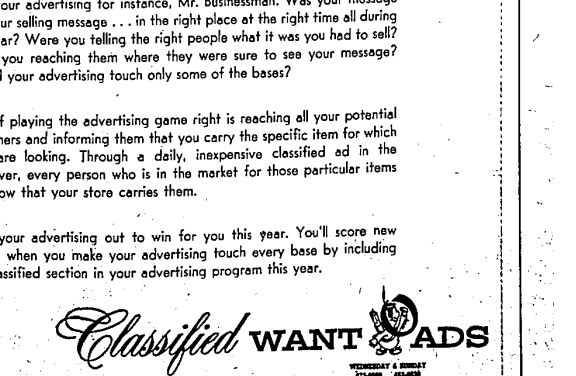
Did you touch all the bases last year?



Take your advertising for instance, Mr. Businessman. Was your message . . . your selling message . . . in the right place at the right time all during last year? Were you telling the right people what it was you had to sell? Were you reaching them where they were sure to see your message? Or did your advertising touch only some of the bases?

Part of playing the advertising game right is reaching all your potential customers and informing them that you carry the specific item for which they are looking. Through a daily, inexpensive classified ad in the Observer, every person who is in the market for those particular items will know that your store carries them.

Send your advertising out to win for you this year. You'll score new profits when you make your advertising touch every base by including the classified section in your advertising program this year.
