What Stealing Costs Us

Theft, burglary, embezzlement, forgery, and other crimes against property rights—are costing the United States $500,000,000 a year, estimates Russell A. Algire, vice president of the National Surety Co., who should know. A lot of things could be done with $500,000,000 a year. That would build 100,000 miles of good roads, endow a dozen universities, or even build 10 battleships just to put our navy on a parity with the next biggest. Here is a case where honestly would pay a big dividend.
