Writer likes involvement and space

Dear Mrs. Green: I find your column very interesting. I only get to read it when I visit my parents who live in Livonia. I would really appreciate it if you would analyze my handwriting.

I would really appreciate it if you would analyze my handwriting

Dear K.A.: Busy and active would be fitting descriptive words to delineate your personality. You like to be involved and on the go. Physical activity is meaningful. You do not like to be confined to small areas and are happiest when you have freedom to move about. You are a social person and find the company of others enjoyable. It appears that sometimes you act even more ingratiating than you may feel. Self confidence seems evident in your handwriting. You are ambitious for recognition and notice. However, a paradox seems present in the fact that you are not challenging yourself enough at this particular time in your life. Dignity, the need to behave in such a way as to win the approval of those people you care about and socialize with, is very important to you. You are ever cognizant of the mores of your peers. There is some particular area of your appearance of conduct that causes you considerable sensitivity. Also there is a little resentment in your nature (formation of the 't's and d's and some inflexible lead in strokes). Your mind is very logical and you do not rely on intuition for your answers. A good sense of humor is noted in the flourish lead in strokes on many of your m's and n's. But you are a delightful conversationalist. You tend to be optimistic in your thinking. You are usually flexible, but must guard against a slight tendency to argue at times. If you have a question about your handwriting write to Lorene Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use a full sheet of white unlined paper and write in the first person singular using either black or blue ink. Please sign your letter and state age and the hand used to write with.
