General 990 Power Humidifier Earns Good Housekeeping Seal

Designed to bring all the health and comfort benefits and other money-saving advantages of proper, controlled humidification to homes utilizing warm air heating systems, the General 990 Power Humidifier manufactured by General Filters, Inc., Novi, Mich., has been granted Good Housekeeping Magazine's seal of approval, according to Jack Christian, sales manager.

In making the announcement, he said:

"Our company is understandably proud of having earned this honor:

"But what is even more important, we believe, is the fact that we accept this outstanding certification and recognition of product performance as a public pledge to consistently maintain the highest quality standards possible in order that we may continue to merit such confidence and acceptance."

The General 990 Power Humidifier, nationally marketed and advertised, is a compactly designed, high-capacity unit suitable for installation on any warm air furnace.

Laboratory and field-tested at six pounds of pure water vapor per hour, this humidifier eliminates dry air and its harmful effects on health and comfort by providing proper humidification at the rate of up to one gallon per hour.

The unit has no moving parts—no fan, pump, motor, spray or float to wear out. It delivers adequate moisture for 39 9/10 of all homes and is easily regulated to deliver just the right amount of pure water vapor or required in any home heated with a warm air furnace.

In Canada, the humidifier is available through Canadian General Filters Ltd., Scarborough, Ont.
