THE LAW AND THE DOPE FIEND

A Detroit paper makes the startling statement that there are 30,000 dope fiends in that city who are being supplied with narcotics by 3000 peddlers.

The question naturally arises: were there as many drug addicts in that city at the time the national and state governments first moved to drastic legislation in hope of suppressing the evil? If not, is it not reasonable to presume that the present method of dealing with the evil is responsible for its increase?

With the partial enforcement of the federal and state laws has come a tremendous increase in the price of the prohibited drugs, but as the drug habit makes thieves of its victims, the price of the articles cuts but little figure in preventing the addict from securing the purchase price. With a successful holdup job, only too often accompanied by the taking of human life, the miserable dope fiend is fixed for a few days.

The net result of the crusade against the evil seems to be an increase in dope fiends, thieves and dangerous human wrecks.

CONGRESS AND THE TAX-EXEMPTS

If publication of income taxes were beneficial in any manner, it was in showing the public the enormous amount of wealth that escapes taxation by investing in tax-exempt bonds. This should move Congress to repeal laws permitting tax-exempt bonds or any amount or argument. By merely changing the law to provide that income from all future bonds should be taxable, billions of wealth would be placed on the tax rolls, and contribute its share toward the cost of government.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, in his recommendations for tax reduction, asserts there is no reason for the existence of tax-exempt securities. He says:

"There ought to be no refuge to which the wealthy man can go and avoid income taxes at times when the government needs the money." A constitutional amendment to make these securities taxable should be passed.

SANTA CLAUS NEEDS HELP

Somebody has to help Santa Claus. There are just too many things for him to look after. That is the reason that club and churches and charitable organizations have taken over part of his job. That too is the reason that the nurses at the Howell Sanatorium years ago instituted their annual Thanksgiving Fair andazaar, to help Santa Claus by seeing to it that every person in that place of sickness may know some of the brightness of the Christmas season.

There are eighty children in the sanatorium. Eighty little folks who can't go home to spend the Christmas with their family or whose family cannot come to them. For some of those little folks there is neither home nor family. The only home they will ever know in the world is the sanatorium on the hill; their only family, the nurses and doctors. There are older folks too, solitary and homeless also.

It is to bring Christmas to the nurses hold a Thanksgiving day their annual fair at which they sell a variety of articles, needle work and art craft products, which they have made themselves, or which have been made by patients about to be discharged. These articles cannot carry infection, because of the care exercised in their making and because they are thoroughly fumigated.

The nurses are not soliciting mail orders but would probably accept them. They do want people who can do so, to come to Howell and see the work being done there, and by purchasing the goods on sale, help bring Christmas to the patients.

"SOME DAY" THANKSGIVING BILL AT SHUBERT DETROIT

Plays may come to the American go, but the good comedy goes on forever. No matter how many times the American auditor may lean towards foreign comedies of salacious intent, farces of indecorous ribaldry, whenever undressed musical comedy is offered typifying the humorous side of American life, from the pen of a reputable American author, with plenty of whisical airs and interlarded by a company of American players of recognized artistry who can act, sing and dance, you can depend upon the American people giving a just and unbiased recognition to the offering; this is a legitimate prelude to the announcement that the new musical comedy, "Some Day," which Mrs. Henry B. Harris will bring to the Shubert Detroit Opera House, commencing Sunday night, November 22, includes in a large cast the local favorites, Gloria Fox who has been here with "Up She Goes" and "Betty Lee"—Charles King, with "The Follies" and "Little Nellie Kelly," Marion Saki, "The Sweetheart Shop" and "Little Nellie Kelly"—Gus Shv, with "Lollipop," Al Sexton with "The Follies," "The Courtnee," a prominent ballerina, and a number of others of the organization, numbering seventy-two people. The European Sensational Dancers, Norma Galton and Marjorie and Robert Altman head what is reputed to be the greatest dancing ensemble in America.

The story is woven around a football game episode; thus affording much timely and colorful action, which is taken advantage of with pictorial and costumal extravagance. Frances Nordstrom wrote the book; Albert Von Tilzer composed the music, and Neville Flessner wrote the lyrics; Jack Haskell arranged the dances, and ensemble numbers and they are said to be marvels of ingenuity and dexterity, and A. H. Van Buren staged the dramatic portion of the story. This is the first musical comedy offering of Mrs. Harris, and from all ranges of the most meritorious and sumptuous productions of this season; full of brilliant dialogue, exceptionally tuneful melodies, a superlative cast of artists and an attractive and expert a coterie of dancers as ever appeared anywhere, not even barring Budapest, which is said to own the best sensational dancers in the world. It offers it comes to attractive women and expert dancers, the United States does not require to take a back seat for any country under the sun. "Some Day" has all the earmarks of being one of the banner musical attractions of the year and a most auspicious offering for the holiday week. A popular priced matinee will be given on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day.

THE MAGIC CARPET

Once upon a time in the mystic land of Persia, there was found among the treasures of a king, a wonderful carpet. One had only to sit on it, wish to be somewhere, and away the carpet would fly till the wished-for place was reached. For hundreds of years it carried kings and princes upon the most amazing adventures. No one knows what it became of, but it may be that its last threads went into the make-up of the first Youth's Companion. For, like the magic carpet, The Companion for 1926 carries you to the land of your heart's desire—up to the Maine woods with the lumbermen; out on the western plains where the warlike Navaho Indians live; far up into the gold regions of Alaska; and away on the Southern Seas in search of treasures and lost islands. All you need for such extraordinary adventures is a young heart and a Youth's Companion. Don't lose time in getting started; subscribe now and receive:

1. The Youth's Companion—32 issues in 1926, and

May Your Lion Ways The influence of character upon features has been much written about, but less has been said about the influence of features on character. Possibly it works as strongly one way as the other.	Surely Slow "Slow, did you ask?" repeated Miss Alicia Fecolobates. "Listen, that guy is so slow that if he saw people in the street with umbrellas up he would be three years jumping to the conclusion that it was raining."	Unfortunate Poet Richard Lovelace, the poet whose name rests on his beautiful lyrics, "To Althea From Prison" and "To Lucrezia on Going to the Wars," spent many years in prison and died in poverty in London's slums.
