The passing of the last compositor at whom Horace Greeley once swore shows that the news print world is growing old.

It is getting along about the time of year when people who work on newspapers have to try to spell that wonderful word "baccalaureate" if that's the way you spell it.

Edison Hadn't Noticed Cigars Were Doctored

Hours were long, but there were compensations, for after the last sightseer had gone friends would drop in for a chat in the library and one of them, Eduard Remenyi, the distinguisher Hungarian violinist, would play his violin—sometimes "$8,000 worth," as Edison calculated, with a slant at the American bent for applying to everything the appraisals of trade.

Nor was humor lacking.

"I was telling a gentleman one day," Edison alleged, "that I could not keep a cigar. Even if I locked them up in my desk they (his associates) would break it open. He suggested to me that he had a friend over on Eighth avenue who made a superior grade of cigars and who would show them a trick. He said he would have some of them made up with hair and old paper and I could put them in without a word and see the result."

"I thought no more about the matter. He came in, two or three months later, and said, 'How did that cigar business work?' I didn't remember anything about it. On coming to investigate it appeared that the box of cigars had been delivered and had been put in my desk and I had smoked them all."

Young Wife Certainly Furnished That Shock

Mrs. Mildred Melville Mallison brightened with an anecdote of the gravity of a recent lecture in Pittsburgh on eugenics.

"It is always a mistake," she said, "for an old man to marry a young wife. The other day an old fellow who had made this mistake was roughly awakened from an afternoon nap. His bride of a fortnight was pirouetting before him in a superb new black gown.

"It's a Paris article," she said. "How do you like it?"

"Very nice," said the old man. "Only at your age, why black, dear?"

"She considered him—a frail, shrunken figure—as he lay on his couch. Then she said:

"Do you remember what Doctor Pillsbury told you? That if you had a shock it would prove fatal?"

"Yes," he admitted.

"Well," his young wife shouted suddenly, "this dress is going to set you back $975!"

"And she stood there, looking down at him—waiting—waiting."

Negro Prolific Inventor

The most prolific of Negro inventors was Elijah McCoy of Detroit, who from 1872 to 1920 obtained fifty-seven patents. His inventions cover a wide range of subjects, but relate particularly to the lubricating of machinery. He was a pioneer in the art of steadily supplying oil to machinery in intermittent drops from a cup, so as to avoid the necessity of stopping the machine to oil it.

Eton Leads Harrow

Mr. Baldwin is the fourth old Harrovian to have become prime minister of England, during the past hundred years, the others being Lord Palmerston, the earl of Aberdeen, and Sir Robert Peel. During the same period six old Etonians were first minister of the crown—Melbourne, Lord John Russell, Gladstone, Roseberry, Salisbury, and Balfour—London Mail.

Swans' Winter Quarters

Swans of the eastern part of North America in winter concentrate on Chesapeake bay, Md.; Back Bay, Va.; and Currituck sound, N. C., and nearby waters. These birds have become bolder under the ten-year protection given them. They now number about 15,000.

Tender Conscience

Passengers who are carried past their stations rarely feel that they owe the railroad anything, but a Fort Smith (Ark.) woman remitted thirty cents "conscience money" to cover an excess trip of less than ten miles she took over the Missouri Pacific lines.

Snake's Fatal Climb

For a snake to make an aerial attack is a rare occurrence, yet a 30-inch reptile was found lying across two electric light wires near Beloit, Kans., baked to a turn. The lights of three towns, for a time were shut off by the unusual incident.
