

Visiting Relatives

A Farmington woman needed someone to help with her housework and care for the children.

Two young women, sisters, whose home is in the central part of the State, happened to be in Farmington. They were visiting relatives here. They had tried without success to obtain employment in their home community.

One member of the family read a "Housekeeper Wanted" advertisement in the Enterprise, and called it to their attention. One of the sisters answered the advertisement and was accepted. . . She had a position and the Farmington woman had secured a housekeeper.

Two weeks later another advertisement appeared. Again a Farmington resident needed help. Again the advertisement was answered, and once more two people's needs and wants were fulfilled by a Farmington Enterprise Want Ad.

So it goes. The little narrative related above is but one example of "true stories" that may be found each week behind the modest little "Want Ads". Whether it be for buying or selling, finding help or obtaining work, for renting or for an infinite variety of other aims and desires, Farmington Enterprise Want Ads DO bring results.

The Want Ad upon which the above advertisement is based appeared in our issues of June 11 and June 25. Names on Request.
