Editorials

Comment On The Cut-off. There were more than a few chuckles in the letter from "A Citizen" in last week's Enterprise, on the subject of the Grand River Cut-off. There was serious reason in it to give pause to the State Highway Department in its plans for the auxiliary highway.

Three years ago, a new road or a paving had but to be proposed in order to be approved. Anyone daring to oppose the project was frowned upon as a "knocker," not only by road enthusiasts but by a large section of the general public. But a few years have brought many changes. The onus is now upon the man who proposes, instead of him who opposes, for opposition is supported by the weight of public opinion.

A Notable Decision

A judicial decree which holds the possibility of affecting the welfare of more thousands of people in Oakland County than any other in many years, was that signed a few days ago by Circuit Judge Frank L. Doty, following rendering of his opinion on the question as to whether public funds in the County's largest bank are a preferred claim. A million and a half dollars in that and other closed financial institutions awaits release to eager, needy depositors, and will be so distributed, unless the decision is disturbed.

It is just this humane outlook upon judicial questions, this consideration of "things as they are," which the outstanding American jurist of the past generation, sitting in the Supreme Court of the United States, has endeavored to write into the fundamental law of our country for nearly thirty years. Throughout three decades the noblest figure on the American bench, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, who retired two weeks ago at 90 years of age, fought for that interpretation of our law which would consider first and foremost the welfare of the great numbers of the people for whose benefit and protection the law, presumably at least exists. For all of those many years, until the very last one, his was, in outward aspect at least, a losing battle. He was, in case after case, year after year, and with usually only one associate by his side, "dissenting." But a few years ago the two were joined by a third, and last year the full measure of justice he sought for others came to himself in the way of "poetic justice." Before his career closed the always "dissenting" minority, dissenting for a broader humanity, became a majority. Its influence will be felt more in the next generation than in this.

LUDINGTON STATE PARK TO BE OPENED IN 1933

Lansing, Jan. 27—With about 3,000 acres of the desired 3,200 acres purchased and a survey crew determining a road site which will probably be built next season, prospects are that the park lying between Lake Michigan and Hamlin Lake will be officially opened as the Ludington State Park in 1933.

CUT IN CONSERVATION DEPARTMENT RATIFIED

Lansing, Jan. 27—The Conservation Commission ratified the previously announced ten per cent cut in departmental salaries at its January meeting.

Further reductions in the activities of the Department will be necessary if the anticipated deficit in the Game Protection Fund, announced at 141,000, is to be materially reduced before the close of the fiscal year July 1.
