Mrs. Ada White of Lansing was the oldest pupil present and Mrs. Henry Nauman was the oldest patrol. She drove from Ancharville with her daughter, Mrs. Herbert, and is eighty eight years old. Fred Brown and family from Memphis, Tennessee and Mr. and Mrs. Jack Forgy of California were among the guests. Farmington Inventor Works On Fruit Grader (Continued from page one) riches. He is far too practical to do much dreaming, and he frankly says he does not expect to be one of those Americans who become wealthy and noted through inventive and promoting genius. He will be neither surprised nor disappointed if he doesn't make a great deal of money on his machine. What he is trying to do is to perfect it so that it will do the job right on his father's farm that he wants it to do better than anything ever seen thus far. Especially he wants to achieve the joy of accomplishing what he set out to do. The are on the market machines which grade apples, sorting them out according to size, and which polish the fruit. One of the commercially-produced machines is the Harry McCracken farm on Twelve Mile Road, where it attracted much attention last summer. It is a combined apple polisher and eliminator, cleaning the apples and dropping out those which are below a certain size. The latter job is accomplished by feeding the apples over a belt which is perforated with holes that permit all apples below a certain diameter to drop through. The larger apples are carried on to the end. Button, however, plans to go further. Last fall he perfected an apple grader which divides apples into several grades, that is, all apples of one size were directed into a certain receptacle, and each size larger accordingly. The machine operates by electricity, separated the fruit into four grades, and much faster than could have been done by hand. There was no polishing equipment. The machine Button works on now would grade the apples into four or five sizes instead of merely eliminating the smallest ones, and would polish in the same process. Button will follow to a large extent the process thus far developed for polishing, with the apples brought into contact with revolving cloths that wipe off the dust. He has added a feature which he believes an improvement, a brush that is designed to reach into the crevice around the apple stem and polish that portion as well as the rest of the apple. Financial considerations caused him to use an inexpensive brush and he made one himself out of rope. Button's design for grading apples is simple, extremely so, yet it differs from anything that he has seen on the market. It consists merely on a series of rollers in pairs. The rollers are about the size of a laundry-wringer rollers, perhaps two inches in diameter, but about twice as long. They turn in pairs, and the rollers are tapered down in the center. Each pair of rollers is tapered the same amount, and the smaller the pair of rollers are in the center, the larger the apple that will drop through. The apples come first to the rollers that have the least taper, that is, the least space between them. Only the smallest apples drop through, and all others go up to the next stage. These rollers are tapered, or cut out, a little more, and here the next size apples are left on the line and drop through, and so on until the 1932. The way the apples go through polishing before sorting. On Button's machine the apples are conveyed not by belt, but on rollers. Cord is wound diagonally around the rollers and turns with them, moving the fruit along steadily. The two units, polisher and sorter, have been constructed separately, and when each is completed the machine will be assembled. Last year not only Button's father, but his uncle, Don Button, made good use of his home-made sorter. If his new combination machine is successful, (and those who know the modest young man are convinced it will be) there will be plenty of demand for it in this apple-growing country.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR To the Editor: The Editor MUST be stirred with the name of the person writing the letter. Please write on one side of paper only. COMMENDATION To the Editor: Farmington Enterprise, Dear Sir: I have read with considerable interest in the issue of 21, 1932 and August 4, 1932 of your paper the verbal report of Mrs. McCullough's speech at the Township Board meeting and the published written report. I feel constrained to write you in commendation of your impartial and fair attitude in the matter. It is quite apparent to the most casual reader that the substance at least was substantially correct. Therefore I cannot help but think that the majority of your readers will recognize in your attitude a desire to maintain the standard of ethics essential to the freedom of the press and a willingness to serve the community with justice to all and special privileges to none. FAIR PLAY FROM "A BOY IN BLUE" Coldwater, Mich. Aug. 9, 1932. Dear Mr. Levinson: The enclosed clipping from last Saturday's Coldwater Reporter was a very pleasant surprise to me. I had forgotten the reunion of our regiment at that place and time. The 65th reunion of the 22nd regiment will be held in Pontiac, August 26. Just 70 years ago, on September 4th, we left for the South land. I was only 17, but memory never fails to recall the pride I felt, when with over 10,000 Oakland County men, women and children, I stood with bowed head and listened to the words of the U. S. mustering officer, making our regiment 1,000 strong, a member of the Union Army. They were the cleanest and best body of men who ever fought in any war in the history of the World. Would that our Loveland country now had two or three millions of such men and boys as when the fate of the first free republic trembled in the balance. A Washington, a Lincoln, a Jefferson, or a Jackson is needed now more than when the rebels tried to strike us down in 1861. Of the eleven Farmington boys who left for the South with me just 70 years ago, I am the only one left. "Waiting the Last Roll Call" W. H. WIEAND - Co. A. 22nd, Michigan. The clipping enclosed by Mr. Wieand, which is an account of regimental reunion held thirty years ago, follows: "Thirty Years Ago "W. H. Wieand, who served in the 22nd Michigan Infantry, received this morning the following invitation to attend the regimental reunion at Owosso Thursday, August 28: "Comrade: Turn out and greet your old colors (and the cow bell), once more and find out how much younger it will make you feel while talking over old times with the BOYS. The comrades of Owosso are going to see that you don't get left behind as you did at Chattanooga in the fall and winter of 1863, or in Andersonville and other ones in 1864, and don't forget to bring along the girls that have stood by you for so many years. "Now boys come if you can, and if you have any stories to tell see that they're new ones.—Think up. "The 'cow bell' mentioned has a regimental history. While some of the members were driving from their homes to Pontiac in August, 1862, they stole the bell from a neighbor's cow. It was carried in every march and in every battle in which the regiment participated. During many of the long forced marches the 22nd made, the bell was brought out and its tones started every foot sore yet into line, keeping step as if on parade, and often in the fight some soldier would grab the bell and when it rattled, and its rattled, every soldier in the regiment plugged away at the rebels with renewed vigor. When the boys came home near the 65th anniversary of the first regimental reunion the patriotic farmer returned it to the boys with the inscriptions engraved upon it of the principal battles in which it was carried, and at every reunion since it has called the old vets to order and summoned them to draw rattlers." Congressman Michael J. Hart, the only Democratic Congressman in Michigan, will be the main speaker at a Democratic Banquet at the Masonic Temple, Pontiac, Wednesday August 17th, 7 p. m. The purpose of this banquet is to draw together leading citizens of Oakland County regardless of party affiliations to listen to the Congressman's interpretation of what happened in the last Congress and what should be done in the next.
