

Boy Dragged By Cow, Is Badly Hurt

His entire chest, abdomen, legs and arms badly burned and scratched by concrete pavement over which he was dragged by a runaway cow, a ten-year-old Farmington Township boy is seriously injured in St. Joseph hospital at Pontiac, with fatal results possible should infection develop. The quick perception of a passing motorist probably saved the lad's life in the mishap, one of the most peculiar to occur in this section in a long time.

The boy, George Slusser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Slusser, 2219 Hawthorne avenue, Farmington Township, was clad only in shorts when last Saturday, he was hauled a considerable distance over the pavement of Nine Mile Road, by the cow.

George had tied the lead-rope to his arm and was walking home with the cow when it bolted, for some unknown reason, and ran away. In endeavoring to halt the runaway, the youth's feet became entangled in the rope and he was thrown to the ground.

Unable to gain his footing, he was dragged some distance on the pavement before a passing motorist stopped and succeeded in bringing the runaway animal under control.

Much of the outer skin was burned from all parts of the lad's body, by contact with the pavement. The driver who saved him left without disclosing his identity. The boy was rushed to Dr. J. W. Norton, who gave first aid treatment and took him to the Record branch of Detroit Receiving Hospital. He was taken later to St. Joseph hospital in Pontiac.

ICED TEA, COLD BATH AFTER HEAT PROVES SERIOUS

Painful cramps in the arms and legs and genuine alarm for some hours was the result suffered by Robert J. Bowerman, 3204 Valley View avenue, Farmington, when he sought too-quick relief from the extreme temperature of the recent record-breaking heat wave, by taking a cold bath and drinking large quantities of iced tea.

Mr. Bowerman had been installing the wiring in a new steel-frame building being constructed on the corner of the recent evening, after working in a temperature of 120 degrees induced by the reflection of the sun's heat from the steel girders. On his arrival in Farmington, he sought comfort through taking a cold bath and drinking iced tea.

An attack of cramps in the arms and legs followed, the severe pain being unrelieved until early in the morning. Mr. Bowerman was treated by Dr. Z. R. Aschenbrenner, after resting the remainder of the week, he returned to work Monday.

The News A Paper Loves To Print!

"You don't look much like a dead man," is the usual exclamation of his friends these days to Ellis Randall. And he doesn't.

Because he is very much alive and healthy. The Enterprise enjoys the pleasure of the happiest task that comes to a newspaper—that of publishing the fact that a man reported dead is still among the living. In last week's issue, the name of Ellis Randall appeared through error in an account of the death in Ypsilanti of Harvey Randall, formerly a resident of Farmington.

Old Foes Face Each Other In Southfield School Meeting

When electors of all other school districts may have wearied of hearing the burden of public affairs when they may have decided to do things as they will, one district still remains, and probably always will, in which the citizens still have the spirit to "fight the good fight" for what they feel to be the best interests of their school and the children thereof.

Thus despite the torturing heat of Monday evening, more than 40 electors of Southfield School District No. 9 stuck it out bravely in one of the school classrooms while they struggled with their private and public welfare of the school above personal comfort. They reviewed, too, the battle of years standing over who should hold membership on the school board, and who should control affairs, and they stayed until well-nigh midnight with their problems.

Week-End Trek Jams Gd. River

While the thermometer soared dizzily over the 100-degree mark and remained there over the week-end, Grand River was jammed with one of the worst traffic jams in history as an endless stream of motorists fled from the city to lakes and resorts.

Although figures are not yet available, it is thought that all-time record was set for week-end traffic through Farmington. The record of the July 4 week-end was easily surpassed by last week-end. The steady caravan commenced Friday evening and continued unabated until Monday morning. The most serious tie-up occurred Sunday evening when east-bound traffic was almost at a standstill for considerable lengths of time.

Many disregarded the sign at the west junction of the cut-off, and sought to gain time by going east on Grand River.

There were many rear end collisions, according to Deputy Sheriff Joseph DeVriendt, but no accidents of serious nature. However, three arrests were made, all for reckless driving. Those arrested are: Francis Dault, 2157, Negunee Road, Farmington.

Fred Erickson, 5039 Grant avenue, Detroit.

Robert Paul Donahoe, 318 Daly avenue, Ann Arbor.

The first two were arrested on Grand River and the third on the Cut-off. Donahoe pleaded guilty before Judge John J. Schulte, and was fined five dollars. The cases of the other two have not yet come into court.

ARREST FEITS ON ASSAULT AND BATTERY CHARGE

Appearing in court together for the second time as defendants on an assault and battery charge, Joseph and Andrew Feit will come before Judge John J. Schulte in the Municipal Court July 24, to answer the charges of Henry Franz, 581 S. Crawford street, Detroit.

According to the bill of complaint, the plaintiff "was looking around in a vacant lot adjoining his cottage, only two years ago, when he discovered missing, a fist fight with the Feit brothers ensued, in which Franz was injured.

Joseph Feit has been arrested three times and his brother Andrew has been arrested once. The two were previously arrested together on an assault and battery charge.

MRS. MARY BADE, LONG FARMINGTON RESIDENT, BURIED

Funeral services were held Wednesday for Mrs. Mary Bade, 88, long-time resident of Farmington Township, who died July 13. Mrs. Bade never fully recovered from a fracture of the hip which she received in February.

Born Marie Sophia Friedricka Holtz in Wilburg, Pomerania, Germany, in 1847, she was married to Frederick Benjamin in 1870, coming to Farmington the following year.

Following the death of her husband, Mrs. Holtz was married to William Bade in 1887. She is survived by a sister-in-law, Mrs. Augusta Holtz, three nieces and two nephews. Burial was in the Clarencville cemetery, with Rev. Breitenbach conducting the services.

May Settle City Bond Suit Soon

Although there are indications that a cash or property settlement may be reached, the $3,500 suit of the City of Farmington against Clyde Chamberlain and Harrison Johnson, as sureties on the bond of the late City Treasurer Louis C. Thayer, is scheduled to come before the Circuit Court in Pontiac, soon. It has reached a place near the head of the court calendar.

The suit, which was started in the spring of 1935, is the result of a shaggy found in the accounts of Thayer, former city treasurer.

Bulletin

Highway Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagener visited Farmington Tuesday and inspected two Grand River situations for which corrections have been suggested. They are the placing of proper warning signals and signs on the hazard at Grand River and Middle Belt, and the flattening of the curve in the north side of Grand River at the junction with the east end of the Cut-off.

Chamberlain and Johnson had signed a surety bond for Thayer for the amount of $5,000, which forms the basis for the city's action.

Although such a bond is not required by the city charter, the City Commission has made it a custom to require the city treasurer to post a bond upon entering office.

The law firm of Schulte and Pare and Earl L. Phillips represent the City. Archie G. Leonard is defense counsel.

Under the court schedule, the case would have been called for trial next week. However, court proceedings have been considerably delayed by excessive heat of the past week, and even though settlement was made, some delay in hearing of the suit would probably occur because of the retarding of court activities.

W. N. MILLERS AID IN SECOND CENTENNIAL

At some time or other most communities enjoy a centennial celebration marking a hundredth anniversary. In Farmington, Michigan, the city of three former residents have the unusual experience this summer of taking a leading part in a second centennial celebration occurring in communities of which they are a part.

They are Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Miller and their daughter Frances of Leslie, former owners and publishers of the Farmington Enterprise. As publishers of The Enterprise they were among the citizens active in the carrying on of the Farmington centennial celebration a dozen or so years ago.

Later, the Millers moved to Leslie, Michigan, where they bought the Leslie Local Republican. Leslie is now preparing for its own centennial and Mrs. Miller has been made the chairman of publicity. Interesting facts about the Leslie centennial are related in The Republican, as follows:

The centennial of the first settlement of Leslie and the southern part of Ingham county will be celebrated with a homecoming festival on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, July 23, 24, 25, 1936. It will be 100 years ago this summer that the first pioneers came into the wilderness where Jackson and Ingham counties join. Many of the descendants of these pioneers are living in the community and are leading participants in the planning of the celebration.

The three day program will include the crowning of "Miss Leslie" as queen, a historical parade as well as historical pageants and addresses. The carnival spirit will be expressed with a "mid-way." A large variety of field sports have been arranged.

Among the orators to appear on the program will be Ex-Governor Wm. M. Brecker, speaking Saturday afternoon and Clarence V. Vit, superintendent of schools at Bellevue.

Two men who are prominent in present day life who call Leslie "the old home town," are Judge Arthur J. Tuttle, Federal judge at Detroit, and the Hon. David H. Crowley, attorney general of Michigan.

Marlin Oemus is recuperating nicely from a small and adenoid operation on Monday.

First Mayor Leaves Church As Monument; Burial Friday

A pair of eyes that ever twinkled merrily, and even a bit mischievously behind their spectacles, have closed forever. A ready, friendly smile that throughout 77 years of remembrance most like a bushy grin is now a tender memory. And a gentle, friendly soul who loved his fellow-men, has gone on. Wells D. Butterfield, first mayor of the City of Farmington, is dead.

To Farmington, which he loved and which he left so reluctantly a few years ago, he leaves not only the memory of his being the first to head the city government, but also a tangible monument to his professional career in which he built the church of the Methodist Church, which daily catches the eye of hundreds of passing motorists as being a thing of beauty—which is just as Mr. Butterfield would like to have it.

Extreme heat of the past week is believed to have hastened the demise of Farmington's former mayor, but for months he had been falling steadily. His decline in health began even before he left this community. In his home at 2181 Eastlawn avenue, Detroit, he had been confined for a long time.

Mr. Butterfield came to Farmington about a dozen years ago. He had won a state-wide reputation as a church architect, and was one of the pioneers in the transformation of church architecture from the old type church which was merely a meeting-hall for Sunday use, into the new type that is a center of community and social activity throughout the week.

In Farmington Mr. Butterfield found the home he loved best and just a little way down the street he built the church structure which held his highest affection. The 65 he designed throughout Michigan. His home was that now occupied by the Fred Bagnall family.

Mr. Butterfield served as mayor from the city's incorporation in 1926 until the spring of 1929, when he declined to be a candidate for re-election.

Father and Daughter

Although Mr. Butterfield's years in Farmington were but the last years of his life, he was still active in his profession. With his daughter, Miss Emily Butterfield, who was the first licensed woman architect in the State, the work was carried on under the name of Butterfield and Butterfield, in which the father took much pride. They designed, among other notable structures, Highland Park High School and Pontiac Baptist Church.

At the services Friday, Mayor Warner will represent the City of Farmington, and a number of other residents are expected to attend.

Exchange Pioneer

In addition to his work as an architect, Mr. Butterfield took great interest in the Exchange Club. He was particularly proud of having been one of the charter members of the first Exchange Club, Detroit No. 1, and when he left Farmington, was made an honorary life member of the Farmington group.

Mr. Butterfield was born in Algonac in 1859. He married Helen Hossie, of Sarnia, Ont., in 1882. She died in 1918, and in 1921 he married 12 Ripley, of Sault Ste. Marie. Surviving him are his widow and three children by his first marriage, Emily H. Butterfield, Clayton W., of Albany, N. Y., and Duane, of Mt. Clemens.

He was a lifelong member of the Methodist church; Corinthian Lodge No. 241 F. & A. M., Detroit Consistory; Michigan Society of Architects and Sons of the American Revolution.

Rev. John Martin of Birmingham will officiate in the funeral at the Methodist church; Corinthian Lodge No. 241 F. & A. M., Detroit Consistory; Michigan Society of Architects and Sons of the American Revolution.

Church Services To Be Conducted by Women

The Women's Union will have charge of the services of the Salem Evangelical Church in Farmington, Sunday, July 12. The program includes an address by Miss Louise Bollean, who was pastor at the Salem Evangelical Church for many years. Also included in the program are several vocal solos by Mrs. Floyd Howard.

Mrs. Margaret Adams is in charge of the services, which will be held at 10:30 a. m. The full program appears in the church notices.

Name the New Pony--Win Prize

"What's in a name?" That oft-repeated question is now answered. There is $2.50 in cash in a name.

Do you know what that name is? If you do, find the entrance blank elsewhere in this issue, write in the name and send it to the Farmington State Bank or place it in the box in the lobby of the bank.

For a pony, like anyone else, must have a name. The pony, now nameless, is being given by the Farmington State Bank to the Groves-Walker post of the American Legion. Chances will be sold on him and the drawing for the winning ticket will take place on the American Legion Gala Day, September 7.

The pony, which is as black as the ace of spades, is now in the keeping of Deputy Sheriff Joe DeVriendt but will be shown at band concerts and the free movies during the summer.

So sharpen your wits and pen, and give the pony a name and you may win the $2.50 prize.

Re-Elected To Farmington School Board

Most trustees of school districts throughout this area continue as members of their respective boards as a result of elections at annual meetings held Monday evening. In two important instances were three trustees in which incumbents were defeated for re-election, most of the meetings passing without contests.

In the two instances where unexpected changes were made by electors, the defeated trustees were both treasurers of their respective boards. In North District No. 8, J. O. Munro, treasurer, was defeated for re-election by Alfred Goe, 21 to 18. This contest followed re-election of William Mair, secretary of the board, and elec-

Trees Go Down, But Not Without a Vote

Most people would think that if some dead trees were menacing a school building and pupils therein, it would be a simple matter for the board of education to cut them down. Not so, it was disclosed at the annual meeting of School District No. 6 Monday evening.

Although the three dead trees are to live one a hazard, State law prohibits any school board from disposing of school property without the vote of the people. The motion passed unanimously.

He has two years more to serve. Mr. Atkinson having been elected last year for a three-year term. About 40 electors were present, and in addition to choosing trustees, voted to authorize the board to sell the old school property.

Esler Losses, Doc Wins

In Southfield District No. 9, O. to Esler, treasurer, was displaced by Mrs. Ollie Kallman, but Joseph Doe, secretary, won a close fight to retain his trusteeship, defeating Mrs. Eva Tesch, former trustee, 15 to 14.

In Farmington District No. 5, Arthur Lamb, treasurer, and Dr. Z. R. Aschenbrenner were re-elected to the board for three-year terms by unanimous vote, there being no other nominees. Rumors that a disturbing issue might come before the meeting proved unfounded, and the assembly lasted only about 15 minutes, with only 18 present.

In Two Are Re-elected

In School District No. 6, the Noble District, President Charles Erwin and Secretary Miss Martha Noble easily won re-election over Leon Newman and Harry Christman respectively. A report on the bond refunding plan recently developed, made by the secretary, disclosed that financial circumstances of the district have been much aided by the plan.
