TELEPHONE IS UNIMPORTANT FACTOR IN SPREAD OF DISEASE GERMS, SAY LEADING SCIENTISTS

Researchers Show Instrument in Same Class as Other Objects Used Daily by Everyone

That the telephone is an unimportant factor in the spread of disease germs, as compared with the many other common sources of infection, is the conclusion of two investigators, recently made by eminent authorities.

No instances of contagion during a telephone conversation, the mouth of the speaker and the mouthpiece of the instrument are necessarily close together. Naturally, people are sometimes wondered whether this could result in contagion, particularly at public telephones with their many users.

The medical profession and those responsible for combating the telephone service, both here and abroad, have long been concerned with this aspect of the service. Experience with millions of telephones gave rise to a number of experiments daily has never disclosed a single contracted case of disease contracted through the use of the telephone.

Two Independent Researches Because of the importance of the subject, the Bell Telephone System wanted to get the best up-to-date information. It therefore arranged for independent investigations to be carried out under the direction of two leading and impartial scientists: Dr. E. O. Jordan, distinguished serologist in the department of hygiene and bacteriology, University of Chicago (now deceased); and Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health practices in the Institute of Public Health, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, New York City.

A total of nearly 450 telephones, representing public telephones, was examined. The general procedure in both the New York and Chicago investigations was the same: a bacteriologist's wipe was applied to the mouthpiece with a sterile moistened swab, and then made laboratory cultures from the swab to discover the presence of germs. Extensive and painstaking laboratory tests were also made to cover other aspects of the problem. Hard to Transfer From Mouthpiece Harmless bacteria were found on many telephone mouthpieces, and certain types of disease-causing bacteria on some.

But it was shown that nearly 90 per cent of most types of germs were dead within 15 minutes after they were deposited on the transmitter, and that there was no tendency for the bacteria to multiply on the transmitter. Also, it was proved to be next to impossible for a germ to be transferred from the mouthpiece of a telephone to a person using the normal way of the Chicago investigation, Dr. Jordan wrote.

"Taking into consideration the relatively small numbers of bacteria transmitted from the mouth to the telephone mouthpieces and their short life in this situation, and also the evidence that disease germs on the mouthpieces are such used and telephone calls are certainly not common and probably exceedingly rare. It is my belief that routine disinfection of all public telephones would not be a justifiable public health requirement.

Findings Disinfection Unnecessary "To be of any conceivable practical value, such disinfection would have to be carried out after each use of the instrument. Even so, it would remain so many other sources of contact for every active city-dweller that the effect of such disinfection on the spread of disease would in my opinion be negligible."

In a similar summary of the New York findings, Dr. Emerson said: "Until the requirement and technique of our ordinary conduct of life has gone beyond any present and foreseeable horizon, the telephone mouthpiece will continue to create no greater sanitary hazard than that of the hand rail, the door knob, and articles in frequent contact with human hands. It is exposed to air-borne dust."

New Law Fixes Notary Public Duties

(Editor's note: Due to an unusually large number of laws affecting both real and personal property, passed by the 1937 Legislature, The Enterprise is publishing a series of articles prepared by Henry T. McCaughan, Oakland County Register of Deeds, and Robert D. Heltsch, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney and Civil Controller for the County. All the acts discussed in this series, with one exception were passed this year. This is the ninth article of the series.)

HOUSE ENROLLED ACT NO. 50 PUBLIC ACT NO. 78 SESSION OF 1937 HOUSE ENROLLED ACT NO. 50 Amending Section 1414 Compiled Laws of 1929. Referring to Expiration dates of notaries public commissions.

The people of the State of Michigan enact: Sec. 1. That notaries public shall affix to each affidavit, deposition, certificate and acknowledgment made or taken by them, and to all other instruments signed notariately, the date upon which their commissions shall expire:

PROVIDED, HOWEVER, That where any such instrument has been heretofore or shall be hereafter recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of any county without the date upon which said notary commission expires being affixed thereto, or shown on the record of such instrument, a certificate by a county clerk may be recorded in such register's office.

Upon the recording of such certificate, showing that such person making such acknowledgment was actually a notary public of such county on the date of such acknowledgment and giving the date on which his commission would expire, the record of such certificate and the record of the instrument shall be effectual for all purposes of a legal record, and such certificate or a transcript thereof may be given in evidence in all other cases, and instrument shall be construed to be as valid and effectual as if such instrument had been in such respect duly executed.

This act is ordered to take immediate effect.

The amending clause begins with the word "PROVIDED," and provides that if an instrument has or shall be recorded in the office of register of deeds from which instrument has been omitted the date of the expiration of notary's commission, the instrument shall be made effectual for all purposes for a legal record, upon the recording of a certificate that such instrument has been omitted the county clerk showing that the person taking the acknowledgment was a notary public on such date, and giving the date of expiration of commission.

NICKELS MAKE UP 91% OF PUBLIC PHONES' INTAKE

About 91 per cent of all the coins that go into public telephones in New York City in the course of a year are nickels. Dimes contribute about 8 per cent of the total number of coins, and quarters about 1 per cent. Because of the large number of coins collected, the New York Telephone Company makes extensive use of mechanical "tellers." These machines not only sort quarters, nickels and dimes, but count them as well. Checkers can count thousands from these machines and quickly compute a day's receipts without handling the coins.

Comments on Northville Flare-up

The conception of the church held by Mr. Neal is the much-touted conception of the man who is hopelessly ignorant of the meaning of the church; its task and its program. Such an individual seeks to explain eternal matters with vocabulary fitted only for temporal things. He is trying to measure the infinite by the finite. The church is a spiritual institution first, last, and always. Methods would attract and suit such a mind would be both a disgrace and a detriment to the place and the function of the church in society. Thinking persons turn from the church when an attempt is made to entertain them under the guise of religion.

He who thinks it possible to walk thru the open door of the church any Sabbath and be assured of inspiration and power might be had simply for the taking, is mistaken. It is folly to expect the minister and the music to lift him out of his workaday world and into the realm of the spiritual preparation. He should come in hope and expectancy,—in earnestness offering what he has as a contribution toward the working of a mission within his own soul.

Today legislators and reformers endeavor to stem the tide of lawlessness and immorality by legal codes and prudential ethics. Theories are loudly proclaimed as a sure cure of the world's evils. Religion to many minds, seems to be made for little else than to be proved. Reason displaces faith, and educated men are too busy advising their ideas of the short-comings of the church to take to their hearts its transforming graces of justice, charity and service. The moral standard of any community will be lifted and strengthened by a wholesale adoption of the church's ethics, the part of the rank and file of its people. Yes, church attendance is an accurate gauge of morality, though not always a fair one.

"Dead End Thrilling Drama Featured At The Redford Theater

The Redford Theater will show two thrilling pictures beginning Wednesday, "West of Shanghai" and "Hullog Drummond Comes Back." Both have played to capacity houses and are considered among the leading cinemas of the season.

"Dead End" film production based on the Broadway stage hit by Sidney Kingsley, and starring the Redford Theater on Friday, January 7, with Sylvia Sydney and Joel McCrea in the starring roles. This powerful drama of a day in the lives of a handful of humans who inhabit a "dead end" city street, where fashionable apartments rub elbows with the squalid tenements of the waterfront, which set records in its Broadway run; was cheered from Coast to Coast, and has even created a height in the film version.

Sylvia is seen as Drina, the slum girl who is battling desperately to raise herself and her small brother Tommy to a better life; McCrea plays Dave, the poor architect she loves, who, in turn, loves Kay (Wendy Barrie), who has found a way out of the slums' into luxury and won't return even for love; Humphrey Bogart is seen as Barney Face Martin, the gangster with a piece on his head, who braves death in the slum where he was spawned only to find that his own mother hates him and that Franey (Claire Trevor), his boyhood
