This Is What We Didn't Have Ten Years Ago

(The Wall Street Journal)

If you are looking back with regret to the good old days of 1929...

Here they are still growing. Transoceanic passenger air traffic across both the Atlantic and the Pacific...

Thirty passenger, four engine, streamliner planes for transcontinental travel with 2,000 horsepower motors...

Handful octane gasoline for airplane motors and large production of 70 and 80 octane gasoline.

A whole new technique of oil refining and processing that is going to turn the oil industry into a synthetic organic chemical industry...

A completely new synthetic organic chemical industry in the incubator stage in 1939...

The new synthetic textile fibers, Nylon and Vinylon, in some ways much better than silk and unlike rayon in composition.

Industrial felt and textiles made from acetylene fibers. Synthetic rubber in variety, better than natural rubber...

Half a dozen new plastics and resins such as Styrene, the best insulator in the plastic field...

New plywood with plastic glue, sufficiently strong and resistant to the elements so that they can be used for building houses, boats and airplane wings.

Sublaminated and sulphapyridine, drugs that cure the deadly streptococcus, germs, pneumonia and perhaps many other diseases...

Synthetic vitamins and hormones, once thought to be mysterious products of living plants...

Record use of ferro-alloys to make record amounts of fine steels in infinite variety for specialized uses.

Continuous wide sheet steel mills. New metals for alloys, including columbium, tantalum and beryllium.

Multi-million-volt X-ray atom smashers that are enabling the research man to know the structure of the molecule and how to make it do tricks.

Fluorescent lighting—using new chemicals to coat light tubes which use a fraction of current now required and give better light of colors desired.

Modulated frequency radio broadcasting that does away with static and gives "clear as a bell" reception.

Television, coming slowly, but rapidly improving in quality and use.

Better movie glass in widespread use.

Polarized glass and invisible glass.

Fibre glass for insulation and a hundred industrial uses, also glass textiles.

Streamlined, lightweight diesel-powered passenger train made of new steels and aluminum.

ENDURING WISDOM

MICHIGAN'S PINES

In general, the large pine stands of Michigan's primeval forests developed on the lighter soils, the sands and gravels, while the hardwoods grew on heavier lands...
