Tin Cans Galore

Housewives seem to have more than their just share of problems these days, and not the least of them concerns the salvage program.

The saving of waste fat presents little difficulty, for if anyone has any waste fat at all they are certainly going to save it for salvage. It is a simple matter to collect the fat until you have a container full, and then take it along with you on your next trip to the meat market—and of course no housewife is unmindful of the extra red points she receives.

And the salvage of waste paper is fairly simple, too, though for a time it proved to be rather difficult to find anyone to take it. Now, however, our Boy Scouts are doing a good job of collecting the paper, and we must not overlook the efforts of the Commandos. With summer vacation weeks now at hand they are more active than ever. No one objects to saving the newspapers when they have been read, neatly stacking them in some out of the way corner, or in the garage, until there is a pile large enough to warrant collection.

The matter of tin can salvage seems a bit more difficult, however. For many months now almost every housewife has been conscientiously saving all the tin cans she empties — carefully removing both ends of the can, washing carefully, and then tucking the ends inside, she flattens them out and stores them away, until a collection is held.

And there is where the difficulty arises — the collection. There is scarcely a home in Farmington without a goodly collection of salvaged tin cans, and while some housewives still cling to the hope that there will be a collection, others have abandoned their hope and are now confronted with the problem of disposing of the salvaged tin cans. All this, despite the fact that Kate Smith — and other radio newscasters — still continue the urgent plea to save tin cans, greatly needed in war production.

What's the difficulty? Why can't we have a tin can collection? They are to be had, just for the collecting, judging from the numerous inquiries that have been received. Every household seems to be troubled with keeping the accumulation of tin cans out of the way, for long ago they overflowed the ordinary containers provided for them, and now they are a general nuisance.

No one objects to putting forth every effort to provide materials for war time production but it somehow doesn't seem quite the patriotic thing to do, after our residents have salvaged the tin cans, to not cooperate to the extent of picking them up.

How about a tin can collection?

Time Of Re-Dedication

We must not lose sight of the fact that we have won but half a victory. The maniacs of Buchenwald and the 1000-year Reich are crushed in the uncomplaining dust of Europe.

But the Jap fights from cave to cave in the islands, and digs deeper into his homeland.

Our fighting men are doing their job. But war workers, housewives — all of us — must dig deeper for war bonds, give more tirelessly for victory.

This is the time when America's men of management and all of America's industry re-dedicate their strength to that final triumph. Our people expect it, and pin their faith upon it.

In all the years, from the time when our land wore Blue and Gray to battle, the strong right arm of industry has supplied weapons of war, and the economic sinews that kept a nation going through trial and tribulation.

Industry's role has not changed.

BITS OF THIS AND THAT

By ELMER T. POCKLINGTON

LITTLE THINGS
 It may have been only a word or a look
 Or maybe a scowl or a frown,
 But it's chalked up against you in somebody's mind
 And will be mighty hard to put down.
 It may have been only encouraging words,—
 It may have been only a smile
 That lightened the load of someone who thought
 That maybe life wasn't worth while.
 It wasn't the size of the gift that you gave
 That spoke out a message so true;
 The gift was esteemed, not because of itself,
 But because it bore something of you.
 Just because you can't preach like a Beecher,
 perchance,
 Don't think you have nothing to give;
 The greatest of sermons are preached to few ears
 They're the every-day lives that are lived.

Looking Back Through The Enterprise Files

TEN YEARS AGO (July 11, 1935)
 New Store Will Open

Farmington will have a new place of business added to its shopping district when Kenneth Loomis and Roy Plimpton open their new hardware store in the Delos Hamlin headquarters on Grand River Saturday.

Reform Seen in City Water Department

Prospects of further marked improvement in Farmington City's financial condition appear to be just ahead, with indications that the water department may soon provide a sizeable additional revenue to the municipality's treasury. Investment in sufficient additional meters to provide every outlet in the city with a meter would, it is believed, be quickly repaid by added revenue obtained.

Projects Include Bridge Widening

E. O. Hutton, Commissioner of public works in Farmington, is awaiting action upon his application for public work relief funds which he has submitted to S. S. Skelton, county relief administrator. A list of six proposed projects includes a new sewer on the interceptor line, north of Grand River, a new section of water main in Town Hall Park, work on the South Power Avenue sewer, and widening the bridges on Shiawassee, Farmington Road and Powers Avenue.

FIVE YEARS AGO (June 27, 1940)

Re-Elect School Officers

Officers of Farmington School will hold the same positions during the coming year as they did during the past year. Dr. Z. R. Aschenbrenner, president; Howard M. Warner, treasurer; and Mrs. Florence E. Lee, secretary, were re-elected by the board. At their meeting the Board members discussed the program of repairs and changes to be made in the school during the summer.

To Select Supervisor Monday

Selection of a Supervisor of Farmington Township to succeed Arthur P. Coe is expected Monday evening at a special meeting of the Township Board. Justice Ernest Blanchard, a member of the Board, and former Supervisor Isaac Bond are mentioned for the post, which it is reported Clark Harry McCracken could have if he would accept. However, Mr. McCracken, a former Supervisor, has indicated that he would not accept the appointment.

Drinking More Milk

Civilians are now drinking between 20 and 25 per cent more milk than during prewar days.

Have You Forgotten How a Thin Pay Envelope Looks?

Some folks are getting so used to seeing money come in fast that they are spending every cent they make. They have forgotten all about horse sense in spending and horse sense in saving.

And, they're treading on mighty thin ice. For there's danger in spending it all. Spend for the things you really need, of course. But plan your spending. Be realistic. Take a pencil and figure out your total income, your necessary spending. Then plan to lay aside a good part of your remaining income for the things you can't buy now but which will be available to you when the right time for spending comes after the war.

And as you plan your spending, also plan your saving. Set goals now—high goals. Think of things you really want—and save to get them. Save by buying more War Bonds—put your over-and-above dollars in a savings account reserve. Then you will help keep prices down... will help the buying power of your dollar up... will have a sound backlog for the readjustment period after the war... will have money to buy worthwhile things when spending is in-style again.

But right now, the style swing is toward saving. For your own sake... your family's sake... your Country's sake—save. And save hard!

Only the nation's efforts to keep your living costs down, the buying power of your dollar up.
