It's Our Opinion:

EDITORIALS: At Long Last . . .

a definite program of action seems to be rising out of the dust of confusion and indecision that has hung over the proposed Township Water System for month and months.

The constructive steps taken at the last two Township Board meetings in regard to the water problem have been refreshing to say the least.

Members of the Citizens' Committee have done an outstanding job in bringing the facts of this problem both to the Board and the people of the Township.

We can understand the concern, registered by some property owners, regarding the details of the proposed program. A great deal of consideration is going to have to be given to the location of wells to avoid the moving of the water problem from one area to another.

Once Again . . .

the voters of the Farmington Township School District have given the Board the green light in its continuing program to provide necessary educational facilities.

Almost without exception the majority of the citizens have supported the program outlined by the Board. This outstanding record exemplifies the progressive spirit and active interest of the people toward their schools.

The realization of this expansion has meant and will continue to mean considerable sacrifice on the part of all the citizens. This makes the record all the more outstanding. Our schools are a mirror of our progress, and we can be proud of the reflection.

The Most Significant . . .

conclusion to be drawn from last week's "Operation Alert" is that we all have a lot to learn.

Civil Defense officials have labeled the exercise a success because it is a step in the right direction. However, we can't help but feel that a great many steps are going to have to be taken, and fast, if we are to protect our people. We do not mean to be alarmists, but we do mean to be realists.

The development of an effective Civil Defense program is a public responsibility. It must become a fundamental part of local, state and Federal government. It must be recognized as a necessity in the interest of public safety whether in wartime or peacetime.

Greater attention to organization and promotion must be started at the top level and must be filtered down to the local community and the individual citizen. This is essential if a realistic program of effective and coordinated defense is to be achieved.

We know that we have much to learn. We hope and pray that we have time enough to learn it!

Now Let's See How She Runs

CITIZENS ALREADY paying new taxes and seeking new laws are outnumbered from all sides by legislators obeying to make political hay out of the record.

Republicans claim they control the legislature and have given Michigan a handful of wonderful new laws.

Democrats say the Republicans' record of accomplishment is not being met by the legislature and have given Michigan a handful of wonderful new laws.

While refusing to kill or cripple the controversial Michigan Turnpike Authority, the Senate dealt it a blow when it ousted William E. Slaughter, Jr., as its chairman.

Senator Creighton R. Coleman, (R-Battle Creek), majority caucus chairman, issued his annual record-of-achievement statement as the legislature waited to adjourn.

He said the legislature was responsible for:
1. A $35,000,000 highway construction program which will concentrate on four-lane divided highways in the arterial road system. It is financed with a 1 1/2 cent increase in the gasoline tax.

2. A $25,000,000 budget-balancing tax program which will increase the load on business but not directly on consumers. It is an increase in the $30,000,000 Business Activities Tax.

3. Lifetime incomes for workers totally and permanently disabled on the job and increases in the maximum unemployment compensation benefits of from $12 to $14 for men with families. The $30 weekly maximum for single workers idled remains unchanged.

4. A new Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC) to bar discrimination in employment by reason of race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry.

Increased budgets for mental health, public health, new Michigan State Police, additional probation and parole officers — all were part of the legislative record.

Gov. Williams praised the legislature on the last night of the session, saying they had done a good job but had fallen below his hopes.

"Perhaps I'm a perfectionist," he said.

Williams had asked for more money for mental health and once held a special meeting to pressure the legislature. The increases granted, he said, will handle only part of the national expansion.

LOOKING AHEAD
GEORGE S. BENSON

In this age of science and technology the education profession of America, and the American citizenry, must not lose sight of the need for "thinkers" as well as "doers." This was the essence of a thought-provoking and stimulating Commencement address at Harding University by Dr. Albert Yudas, United States Commissioner of Education. Since his words were directed not only to the Harding graduating class, students and faculty, but to the nation as a whole, I wish to pass them along to this column's widespread audience.

"The effectiveness of education would seem," said Dr. Brownell, "to depend in a large measure on how well it fulfills its basic responsibilities to strengthen good citizenship, to keep alive and to transmit the best of mankind's cultural heritage, to provide some understanding of the scientific bases of modern life, and to teach the student how to think as well as to pursue the quest for the good life — the end product of all education. All schools and colleges — whatever their origin, or however supported — share in the obligation to help meet our national needs in the ways that fit them best."

Speaking particularly of specialization in education, Dr. Brownell asked: "Where, in this intense time-consuming effort to master a special field, is there going to be a place for thinking, for philosophy, for reflection? How are we going to preserve our perspective? How are we going to find men and women who can see what they do in relation to what others do? Who can form balanced judgments who are capable of cutting through to the heart of the matter; who can find the simple truth and recognize it as such?"

"There is grave danger that we will go as a Nation, lose our way in a labyrinth of formulas, figures, and facts; that we will bog down in a sea of technical problems. I say this because it seems to me that almost every major technical advance creates a philosophical problem."

"To illustrate: The technical solution to the atomic bomb poses the awesome problem of what to do with it. We cannot ask the scientist to dispose of his Frankenstein anymore than we can ask the printer to solve the comic book menace that rolls forth from his million dollar, high-speed, four-color presses. The technician-specialist, I repeat, is limited in his usefulness, and he is creating problems he cannot solve. . . . It is quite evident, I believe, that we need scholarship, not just specialization."

"I do not want to say anything which is disparaging to scientists. We need them if we are to make progress. We need many more than we are preparing. The survival of all that we cherish may well depend on our preparing more and better scientists."

"What we need, if our contemporary society is to survive," said Dr. Brownell, "is the young man or woman who is technically proficient, but who is also capable of."

Insiders said it was the death knell of turnpikes in Michigan, at least temporarily. Bond houses and other financiers are reticent about dealing with authorities with two vacancies, and which have stirred up controversy.

MOTORISTS have been hit by a two gasoline price increases within a month and everybody wants an investigation.

The first boost of 1 1/2 cents a gallon came before the state tax increase added another 1 1/2 cents. Neither refiners nor wholesalers said they were in a position to absorb the new tax.

Senator William S. Brownfield (R-Royal Oak), chairman of a legislative investigation two years ago, said he would favor another this year. His 1953 findings, however, are sobering.

"We found the state couldn't do."

Looking Back Through The Enterprise Files

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO (June 20, 1930)

Plans by the City of Farmington for the construction of a sewer system this year received a stunning blow Wednesday when attorneys for the bonding company purchasing the bonds declared they could not approve the issue because of a provision in the City Charter. The provision blocking construction states that "the Commission is hereby prohibited from borrowing any money or authorizing the creation of any liability or indebtedness against the City in any one year exceeding in the aggregate amount one-half of one per cent of the assessed valuation of the property of said City." The city's valuation is $2,633,839 as set by the Board of Review two weeks ago.

Albert Yudas, 16, injured his arm in an auto accident last week end and it was feared, by doctors at Redford Receiving Hospital that amputation was required. A noted bone specialist, who happened to be in Detroit for a convention, was called in. He set Yudas's arm, avoiding the necessity of amputation.

TEN YEARS AGO (June 28, 1945)
High School Site
At a meeting Monday evening, the Farmington School Board discussed the proposed site for a new high school building between Ten Mile Road and Shilawassee. The purchase agreement for the approximately 17 1/2 acres of property has already been signed. The Board asked that legal opinions be obtained to determine whether a road for the new school site would be considered a public road or if the Board would have the right to spend money for such a road without a vote of the district. An opinion was also requested as to whether or not the Board could dedicate ground for such a road and if funds from the building and site fund might be used for the construction of the road.

FIVE YEARS AGO (June 20, 1950)
"Sub" Ban Lifted
Building by the C. M. Construction Company was resumed early this week in Floral Park after the lifting of a stop order placed on the subdivision by the City Board of Appeals. The two homes under construction with septic tank drain fields on 40-foot lots will be completed, but in the future no homes requiring drain fields will be permitted on 40-foot lots. Steps are also being taken to determine the attitude of the residents toward paving of streets and closing of alleys in the subdivision.

Telephone Rates
Telephone rate increases were announced by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company for Farmington residents. The new rates will maintain increases of from 25 to 50 cents per month for residences and 50 to 70 cents for business users.
