Use Red, White, Blue Flowers To Create Patriotic Atmosphere

By BETTY FRANKEL
Special Writer

Bands blare and fireworks burst in the air as we celebrate the Fourth of July. Did you ever think of enhancing the patriotic mood by growing a red-white-and-blue garden as a setting for the family picnic -- or at least growing some flowers for a red-white-and-blue bouquet for a patriotic party table?

It's not hard to select flowers for such a garden. There are many to choose from, and the effect is gay and sprightly. One area gardener has complemented the colonial furnishings of her home with a flag-colored entrance planting that matches her color scheme. A red rose blooms on a trellis at one side of the front porch. On the other side along a walk that extends from the front door to the driveway is a three-foot wide bed with a row of bright red geraniums next to the house. Deep blue lobelia fills the middle of the bed and snow white dwarf chrysanthemums form a border along the front edge. Its gay and patriotic and even provides flowers for small bouquets for the house.

Firecracker stamens seem to have been made for this kind of display. It's an All-America Silver medal winner with lots of intense red flowers all summer long. Try combining it with spikes of white snapdragons or white larkspur and blue bachelor buttons.

Equally good would be the new stamens, "Trailblazer," which is the first hybrid kind to come on the market. This could be combined with white baby's breath and deep blue Chisholm forget-me-nots (Cynoglossum). The latter bloom all summer and withstand heat very well.

A more elegant combination could be obtained by planting of tall sprays of delphinium, white regal or madonna lilies, and red American roses. This would be a delightful effect, but would not be on display all season, unfortunately.

True blue flowers are relatively rare, but are a lovely addition to any garden. They blend with all other hues and seem to keep other colors from fading. Morning glories are truly "heavenly blue". Blue-bells, blue salvia, and wishbone flower (Torilis) are others that might be planted for their clear blue blossoms.

No red is more intense than that of red Salvia, or sage as it is also called. Another brilliant red is Blaise veronica, a 1968 All-America winner.

Some flowers, such as bachelor buttons, can be a patriotic garden in themselves. They are available in deep and pale blue, pure white, and also bright red. Larkspurs come in red, white and blue, also as sweet peas. Snapdragons are to be found in white and bright red. The new hybrid "White Ruffles" is a giant with ivory white flowers. The rocket snapdragons are also bushy, vigorous hybrids. There is a White Rocket and also a Red Rocket.

With all these choices and combinations it is not at all difficult to have a little extra fun on patriotic holidays with a real, true-blue Yankee-doodle garden and flower arrangement.

Baby Dry Skin

For those with dry, sensitive skin, try this soft treatment: Dissolve powdered milk (equivalent of one quart liquid) into your bath water and add a half-cup of rock salt and two capsules of baby oil. Your skin will respond to this babying.

PROTECT FRUIT FROM BIRDS: We've tried a lot of methods for keeping birds out of strawberries, blueberries, cherry trees, etc., and have concluded that nothing beats a netting material, draped over the bushes, to keep the birds out. There are many kinds of netting on the market now and most garden centers carry them.

Note: You cannot drape the net directly on the plants, as birds can peck at the fruit through the holes. You have to put up a couple stakes with cross arms to keep the netting off the bushes and in this way you provide a barrier which works perfectly for keeping the birds out.

It pays to use the plastic treated net materials as they can be used over and over again, without rotting, mildewing or spilling.
