April Fools Day takes on new dimensions as your gang grows up, but you don't get to forget it.

It used to be that I had to act dumb (not all that difficult, really) when I was told several times on the day of fools that my slip showed or my shoes were untied or that I was afflicted by some other major problem.

This year it's something different. What I'm doing is driving a different car to celebrate April Fools Day.

I WAS TALKED into a switch by our car-owning daughter, and the reason is that she tends to be a bit active in the practical joke department, any time of year.

She figured her familiar car on a campus parking lot would be a sitting duck on April 1, and made a good case for trading for the day. I warned her she had better keep mine well hidden.

Even if she gets through without any flat tires, I'm sure she'll keep the foolish character of the day well in mind.

As editor of her school paper, she's been working for a couple of weeks on an assortment of ridiculous stories and headlines for the issue that hits the stands April 1. Now she's hoping nobody believes what he reads in the campus news today.

HER YOUNGER sister—also an editor but at the junior high level—may have an even better idea.

"We've told people there was going to be an issue of the paper today," she said, "and when they come to buy it we'll say 'April Fool!'"

I'm sure that members of the family, whether in the new paper distributing or non-distributing back lot, will be dreaming up something to spring on an unsuspecting mother when she gets home today.

Don't tell them I'm wary. But do warn them there had better not be a flat tire on my adopted car.

It's always open house at Seton Nursery School

Places are still open this semester in Seton Nursery School & Day Care Center, 2975 Inkster Road between Twelve Mile and Northwestern, in Farmington Hills. "Parents of young children scheduled to begin kindergarten in the fall might consider giving them a head start with a semester in a good nursery school like Seton," said Marjorie Fitzsimmons.

Acting director Fitzsimmons welcomes parents for an inspection of non-denominational Seton anytime Monday through Friday 9 a.m. - 3 p.m. and on weekends by appointment. She hopes parents will avail themselves of a visit and the decision to enroll their child or to take advantage of the day care offered.

At Seton, children of similar age play and socialize in a stimulating, congenial environment, as visitors will find. A child can express his feelings and energies, indulge his curiosity, and learn to be resourceful and responsible.

A WIDE VARIETY of facilities and learning experiences are available, supervised by a staff of state-certified teachers and assistants. A hot lunch is furnished each day.

Nursery School activities are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., and day care is 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Enrollment is down at Seton, as it is at many schools, which means a budget pinch, according to Ms. Fitzsimmons. Therefore, those parents who enroll their children in Seton for the semester or the day help the school while offering their kids a valuable experience.

A Seton scholars' fund is also available for those who are willing to make donations. The proceeds go to help deserving but needy children by their educational objectives.

Clean house when selling

When you show your home to prospective buyers, you want it to look as attractive as possible.

The following tips will help:
Remove all unnecessary articles from your basement and attic. Strive for an uncluttered look.

If necessary, brighten dark basement walls with a light coat of paint.

Arrange bedrooms so they look as large as possible. Remove excess furniture, and use freshly laundered curtains.

Kitchens and bathrooms are showcase areas for cleanliness. Check and repair caulking in bathtubs and showers. Make sure these rooms sparkle.

When showing your home, avoid having too many people present.

The potential buyer will feel like an intruder and will hurry through the house. Keep pets out of the way.
