Lecturer says

Business should promote self

By CATHLEEN COLLINS

"I can't understand why businessmen and women who prosper in the face of government regulation and union demands, who sail verything from signers to automobiles, can't more effectively sell the company of the c pensation.

Van Peursem urged members of the busi-ress and manufacturing communities to not only run their businesses, but to try to communicate exactly what that business means to the general public.

ANTI-BUSINESS attitudes and erroneous notions of what business really is 'In a study of 54 Michigan businesses, 31 said they were not expanding here and 28 said they wished they had not located here in the first place."
