

Bicentennial gardens

The one and one-half hour film was edited by the committee not only to fit time limitations, but for subject matter also.

The film is about a group of teenagers who share their feelings about their parents, peers, their identities, inner conflicts, sex and morals. Due to the subject matter of the film's frank discussions, parental guidance is advised for this showing.

The outcome of the program will be the basis for workshops to be presented in the fall.

Admission is free but donations will be accepted to defray costs.
