

C'ville candidates face the issues

This report on candidates was prepared as a public service by the Livonia League of Women Voters, a non-partisan organization.

Information for this guide was gathered from questionnaires sent to candidates running for the Clarenceville school board. The questionnaire asked for biographical data and responses to two questions concerning local school problems.

In the Clarenceville election, there are three candidates, each hoping to fill the two remaining years of Thomas Wilson's term. Wilson resigned in order to retire to Florida.

The other seat up for re-election is that of Norman Hunt. Hunt is running unopposed.

All the candidates were asked the same questions.

NORMAN HUNT. He did not answer the questionnaire.

FRANK P. LOZANO, 52, of 19822 Lathers, Livonia, is presently an assistant principal at Maybury Elementary School in Detroit. He has a B.Med. from Eastern Michigan University, a MA from University of Michigan in education, and a MA from Marygrove. He also has finished all course work in a doctorate program at the University of Michigan and is presently a doctoral candidate at that university. He considers his work in gaining his specialist degree in educational administration and supervision as valuable for a school board member. This course work allowed him to work in such areas as educational finance, declining enrollment, labor negotiations, school community relations, teacher expectations, bilingual education, career education, curriculum and methods for alternative education.

J. DONALD NICHOLSON, 38, of 20044 Sunbury, Livonia, is presently employed with Westinghouse Electric Corp. as Detroit district order service supervisor. He majored in business administration at the University of Toledo. He lists his qualifications as: parent of two children in the Clarenceville school system, and regular attendance at the school board meetings. He also feels his business experience in budgeting, staffing and labor management relations would be valuable to him as a school board member.

BARRY M. SHERMAN, 25, of Antago, Livonia, is a patrolman in the Livonia Police Department's youth bureau. His educational background includes graduating from Clarenceville High in 1969, receiving his Associates of Arts from Schoolcraft College, achieving a BA in vocational teaching, certificate-criminal justice from Madonna College and police training from the Criminal Justice Institute. He feels his job with youth and adult-related programs gives him an added awareness to the community needs.

1. How do you view the trend of declining enrollment in the area and what do you feel can be done to handle its effects?

HUNT: No response.

LOZANO: Declining enrollment is a reality. We must develop methods that will assure us of a continuation of high standards for quality education. Namely, a new tax-based funding for our schools, federal funding for special projects and innovative methods for alternative education.

NICHOLSON: Declining school enrollment will continue according to current population forecasts. School systems will be forced to adjust class size and public distribution to maintain realistic pupil-teacher ratios. School boards must control with as little reduction in quality and quantity of circulation as necessary.

SHERMAN: Declining enrollment will definitely affect Clarenceville as it has used its land potential for housing. Therefore, it is important to maintain a quality education that would attract families with school age children. Inevitably, with declining enrollment, there is less need for staff. I would recommend not filling vacancies rather than laying off.

1. What programs or policies would you like to implement if you are elected?

HUNT: No response.

LOZANO: I believe in total education in where the community, industry, commerce and parent work together and contribute towards educational goals. Foremost in this concept for total education is the home learning center, a monitored reinforcement learning concept that involves the school and home.

NICHOLSON: My main goal as a member of the school board would be to control costs in non-academic areas in an effort to maintain present student-teacher ratios and educational programs. This would be done by energy-saving programs and strict budgeting and cost controls.

SHERMAN: I would attempt to implement a citizen advisory committee, which would report and make recommendations to the Board of Education on issues before the board and problems within the school district. I am also in favor of "get tough" policies involving drug traffic and vandalism within the schools.
