'The Gingerbread Boy'

Watch out for Holly Schmidt

Chamber of Commerce, take note: I've just learned that when the girl who represents Farmington walks on stage at the Miss Michigan contest late this month, she's going to have a big cheering section in the audience. At last count, close to 45 persons are registered in Muskegon hotels on and off through the week of June 20, all for the specific purpose of cheering on Holly Ann Schmidt.

That alone speaks highly for the North Farmington High School senior. In addition to relatives, she told me (with some awe) that the neighbors on both sides of her residence on Lakehurst were going to be in attendance for a good part of the week's hoopla.

The judges of the Miss Farmington contest did well by us last summer, and my guess is that she will do us all proud in the next step up the competition ladder.

For starters, she's a knockout to look at by anyone's standards.

Then too, in some hard-to-grab-onto way, while you are aware of her beauty, you are simultaneously aware of an almost perfect balance of innate modesty and self-confidence—certainly a rarity for one who has yet to reach her 20th birthday.

SHE TOLD ME she was approaching the big date with "extreme nervousness," and she probably is, but the words were belied with a serene exterior and more poise than most parents could ever dream to hope for in a teenager.

She has the ability to laugh at herself, and even contradict herself in mid-sentence without getting ruffled.

One of the pageant's traditions is that the local winners throughout the state are invited with crown and banner to be guests at other local pageants. Our girl is using her invitations for critiquing.

She said that on these occasions she sits as close to the stage as she can, imagining that she is a judge and striving to see what they see. She then rattled off a string of goofs others had made that ran from improper undergarments to undisguised leg bruises. She will not be making the same mistakes, she said.

Time spent critiquing was dovetailed in with time spent practising appropriate wardrobe.

So she's been doing her homework on all fronts and this has been going on for almost a year.

What more do you want, guys?

Scholarships are awarded

Twelve June high school graduates have been honored by Oakland Community College with full scholarships for 1977-78.

Money for the awards was made available by the college board of trustees and by contributions of faculty, staff and administrators at the college.

Recipients of the James Lewis scholarships include Gail Henderson, Madison Heights; Debra Lee Spencer, Walled Lake; Kimberly Kopko, Farmington; and Susan Rockwell, of Royal Oak.

Those receiving scholarship committee awards are Stephen Eddy, West Bloomfield; John LeBlanc, Waterford; Kirk Churan, Pontiac; Elizabeth Nail, Walled Lake; Laura Raieri, Farmington Hills; Linda Lukasiewicz, Farmington; Judy Silberstein, Southfield and Vicki Muncy, of Madison Heights.
