

Brashear tops Moga

Paul Moga, a senior student physician from the Kirksville College of Osteopathic Medicine, will begin a four-month assignment at Brashear Rural Clinic. The clinic is one of four operated by the college.

The clinic program was begun in 1949 to provide general health care in the small communities of northeast Missouri. Robert J. Blickensderfer, D.O., is director of the program, and with the assistance of other members of the college staff, supervises the work of each student physician.

Moga is a resident of Farmington Hills and a graduate of Oakland University. He has had clinical training at Davenport Osteopathic Hospital in Iowa, the Charles E. Still Osteopathic Hospital in Jefferson City, Mo., and Normandy Osteopathic Hospital in St. Louis.

Barry Sherman, the youngest member ever elected to the Clarenceville school board, has no trouble keeping one of his campaign promises.

The 25-year-old Livonia policeman said several weeks ago that something must be done to minimize the district's declining pupil enrollment problem.

Sherman, the father of a 2-year-old son, became a father again last week when his wife gave birth to a girl, Stacy Lynn, in Botsford Hospital. Sherman, a 1969 Clarenceville High School graduate, won a two-year term on the school board Monday with a narrow 30-vote margin over runner-up Donald Nicholson, 38, of Livonia.

Finishing third was Frank Lozano, 52, of Livonia. Norman Hunt, of Farmington Hills, board president, was unopposed in his bid another four-year term.

SHERMAN, polled 175 votes; Nicholson, 145; and Lozano, 42. Hunt had 190. Only five per cent of the district's 6,400 registered voters in Livonia, Farmington Hills and Redford Township voted in the election.

Sherman was behind Nicholson by a handful of votes before his home precinct (number 2 at Clarenceville Junior High) reported a 61-14 margin for him.

Sherman was president of the Clarenceville High student council and received his associate degree from Schoolcraft College and his BA in social science from Madonna College.

The new board member, who will assume his duties July 1, has been a Clarenceville resident for 12½ years.

After the election, Sherman commented that he was surprised he won the board seat to be vacated by veteran Thomas C. Wilson, who is resigning this month after 16 years on the board.

He said he campaigned by distributing flyers containing his resume and talking to voters.

After he is sworn in as a board member, Sherman said he would "work on school district problems and try to solve them."

Sherman added that he wants to maintain a quality program and curriculum to attract young families with children to Clarenceville.

Being a young father with small children interfered in the last week of the campaign for Sherman.

With his wife in the hospital with their newborn daughter, Sherman had to baby-sit at home with his son, Eric.

IN THE SCHOOLCRAFT college board and millage increase campaigns, Clarenceville voters were in step with the rest of the college district in voting down the 8 of a mill (80 cents per $1,000 of state equalized valuation) increase.

Clarenceville residents, although they approved a local tax increase in a special election in January, rejected the Schoolcraft millage by a 188-169 margin.

Of the nine Schoolcraft board candidates, Clarenceville voters supported a Clarenceville High graduate, Karl Sjogren, who failed to win one of three six-year terms.

This is how the Clarenceville residents voted on the college board candidates:

Rosina Raymond, incumbent, 141; Sjogren, 140; Laura Toy, 140; Richard Harry Greenleaf, 71; Jack Bologna, 64; and Michael Cicciolla and George Gravala, 32 each. Ultimate winners in the college district, which includes Livonia, Plymouth, Garden City and Northville, were Mrs. Raymond, Wozniak and Greenleaf.

Sjogren finished seventh in the college district.

College voters rejected the millage boost by a 1,503 vote margin.
