

Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 18-22.

HOUSE
Food Stamp: Rejected, 154 for and 262 against, at attempt to cut about $674 million from the fiscal 1978 food stamp budget, a reduction of about nine per cent. The amendment was proposed to HR 7558, a Department of Agriculture appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate. Members voting "yes" wanted to spend less on food stamps.
Rep. John Rousset (R-Calif.), the sponsor, said: "It is time to get those individuals above the poverty line off the food stamp program. By enacting my amendment we will say to the program administrators, 'Do a better job—cut out the waste and direct the program to the truly poor and the truly needy, including the elderly.'"
Rep. Baltasar Corrada (D-Puerto Rico), an opponent, called the amendment "an attempt to foster a fiscally responsible image at the expense of many who have no real political power to oppose this attempt and live under the constant threat of merely coping for survival in what many of us consider an increasingly affluent society."
Rep. William Brodhead (D-17) voted "yes."
Reps. David Bonior (D-12), James Blanchard (D-18), William Broomfield (R-19) and Earl Pursell (R-2) voted "yes."
Sugar Subsidy: Rejected, 119 for and 272 against, an amendment to kill a proposed federal subsidy of the U.S. sugar industry. Members voting against were in favor of the $240 million subsidy for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1. The cash subsidy of growers is a new program to enable the domestic industry to compete better against foreign sugar. The amendment was proposed to HR 7558, the fiscal 1978 Department of Agriculture appropriations bill, later passed and sent to the Senate.
Rep. Robert Michel (R-Ill.), sponsor of the amendment, said: "Three years ago... the price of sugar soared. Sugar growers cashed in on the high prices and expanded their production. But the rise in production has resulted in a superabundance of sugar on the world market... and sugar growers found themselves in trouble as the world became inundated with sugar."

Roll Call Report

Rep. Gillis Long (D-La.), an opponent, said: "It would be a misrepresentation to suggest that sugar farmers have brought their current plight upon themselves by overplanting in order to take advantage of world prices that peaked in 1974. The current depressed price for sugar, indeed, results from a number of factors, but overplanting by cane and beet farmers is not one of them."
Broomfield and Pursell voted "yes."
Donior, Brodhead and Blanchard voted "yes."
Abortion: Adopted, 201 for and 155 against, an amendment imposing a total ban on the use of federal funds to finance abortions. The amendment eliminated the one remaining instance in which federal funds could be used—cases where the mother's life is endangered by the birth. About 300,000 abortions are being performed annually on poor mothers under Medicaid.
The amendment was attached to HR 7555, the fiscal 1978 appropriations bill for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, later passed and sent to the Senate. Members voting for the amendment favored the total ban.
Rep. Henry Hyde (R-Ill.), the sponsor, said: "We can tell the ghetto mother that she is going to have to fight for everything which the middle class woman has, such as education, housing, clothing and food, but then we can say: 'We will give you one thing. We will give it to you and we will pay for it. We will let you kill your young.'"
Rep. Millicent Fenwick (R-N.J.), an opponent, said: "Do we really think we stop abortions by anything like this (amendment)? No, we do not. We send people to motels and abortion mills. We all know it. The doctors can tell us. The victims turn up in the hospitals of various sites, sometimes dying from infection or hemorrhage."

ment to an agency within the Department of Labor. It was this plan that the amendment sought to prevent.
Sen. Harrison Schmitt (R-N.M.), sponsor of the amendment, said: "I am convinced the Department of the Interior has done as effective and conscientious job of promoting mine safety and improving conditions for miners as was possible under existing law. If there is fault... it is the fault of Congress."
Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.), an opponent, said: "The difficulty with MESA is that it has failed at every turn. It has failed in terms of reducing the danger... in terms of the training required of miners in order to maintain a reduction in danger... in terms of issuing adequate and timely mandatory standards."
Riegle voted "yes" and Griffin did not vote.
Waterway Fees: Rejected, 44 for and 51 against, an amendment to delay the imposition of federal tolls on commercial barges that ply inland waterways maintained and/or built by the federal government. Those senators voting "yes" favored imposing the fees. The amendment was proposed to S 1529, later passed and sent to the House.
At issue is the fact that inland shippers historically have benefited from billions in federal improvements on waterways, but have not had to pay for the work. Railroads and other competitors call this unfair. S 1529 requires that, by 1990, fees will be levied to cover 100 per cent of maintenance and operation costs and 50 per cent of capital improvement costs. The rejected amendment called for further study of the matter before legislating such fees.
Sen. Russell Long (D-La.), a supporter of the amendment, said railroads have received billions of dollars in government benefits not available to the commercial barge industry, and that the purpose of the proposed waterways fee "is to help the railroads make more money at the expense of their competitors."
Sen. Mike Gravel (D-Alaska), an opponent, said he supports the fees because "if we have improvements made with federal tax dollars and we can identify the beneficiaries we ought to be smart enough to say that the chief beneficiaries should pay for part of the improvements."
Griffin and Riegle voted "yes."

Young job hunters can get free ads

High school students seeking summer jobs may again use Observer & Eccentric classified ads free this year.
"The purpose is twofold," said Fran Gillis, a classified ad phone room supervisor who has been involved in the program for several years.
"First, it gives youngsters an opportunity to find employment suitable to their ages and, hopefully, within their own communities.
"This enables would-be employers in the community to hire young people who are frequently within walking distance of them for babysitting, yard work and other jobs."
"Second, it is a community service which we are able to perform without discrimination. It is not designed to help this or that particular group, but to help anyone of high school age find employment. A youngster need not be associated with scouting or any particular organization.
"It's our way of showing our readers we appreciate their interest in Observer & Eccentric Newspapers and classified ads."
The experience of interviewing for a job is often new in the youngsters. Mrs. Gillis said. So are the joy and independence of earning money.
"We always hope the parents will take a genuine interest in the young people's calls so that any problems can be averted—for example, by going with the youngster to the interview, knowing whom they will be working for or being alert to any suspicious phone calls their youngsters might receive.
"We hope to be able to continue this free service and would like to accommodate as many youngsters as possible," Mrs. Gillis said.
The free classified ad form appears in the "Help Wanted" portion of the classified section. It will be published today and again in Monday's edition. A parent must sign the completed form.
The result can be success on a youngster's first quest for a summer job.
