Farmington area job hunters will have a shorter trip to their nearest Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) office.

They can pour over the lists of jobs available through the MESC at the organization's new office, 34793 Grand River, in the World Wide Shopping Center.

Since Monday, two job interviewers and a supervisor have been working out of the office, which is under the direction of the Livonia branch of the MESC, according to Norm Isotalo of the organization's information office.

Moving will enable the office to reach persons who live in the north-west suburbs, according to Isotalo.

"We wanted to move a little further west. The population seems to be moving there. It's a convenient location for the population," he said.

One of the features of the new office is the MESC job bank, a screened computer which lists opportunities that have been registered with the MESC.

Lately, fewer persons have had the occasion to use that listing, according to Isotalo, as unemployment decreases in the metropolitan Detroit area.

"THIS JUNE, unemployment was at 6.7 per cent. This time last year, it was nine per cent," he said.

"Unemployment has improved considerably. There are more people working."

MESC has a gamut of job hunters attracted to its listings. It includes blue collar, professional and domestic jobs in its listings.

Providing job listings will be the main purpose of the Farmington

MESC. Unemployment compensation checks will be distributed for the area from the Livonia branch office.

Employers can contact the Farmington office to look for new help by calling 476-1610. The office is open from 8:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Assumes post

Lawrence J. Hemmen, of Farmington Hills, has been promoted to senior vice president at Manufacturer's Bank.

He attended the Detroit Institute of Technology and began his banking career in 1959. He was advanced to branch officer in 1968.

He also attended the School of Bank Administration of the University of Wisconsin and received a certificate from the American Institute of Banking.

George West, manager of the Livonia branch of the Michigan Employment Security Commission watches as the job finding computers in the organization's new Farmington office go to work for some potential employees.
