Todd visits space center

Civil Air Patrol (CAP) Cadet Todd Snively may never ride a rocket to the moon but after this summer he will understand what's going on a lot better.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Snively, of Farmington Hills, who, with 55 other teenage CAP cadets, underwent an intensive Space Flight Orientation Course at Marshall Space Flight Center, under the direction of National Aeronautics and Space Administration personnel. It was there that much of the equipment used in America's space effort was developed.

The cadets got a first-hand look at the variety of items which constitute space hardware, and got an idea of the myriad of technicalities involved in putting an object into space.

Recreational activities took up their evening time. They billeted in the arm's Redstone Arsenal.

The course is one of a number of specialized activities offered cadet members of CAP, the volunteer civilian auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force.

He is selected to participate in any one of them is considered an honor.
