

Furs are elegant

Easy, elegant fashion uncluttered and ungimmicked—that's the Chloe look in furs for fall and winter.

According to Hal Dittrich of Dittrich Furs, whose new branch will open in Bloomfield Hills in September, "the unique shoulder line design is the fashion key that turns it all on."

"This remarkable feature, incorporated in each Chloe style, makes the long-haired furs such as lynx as slim-lined as mink or nutria. The secret of the construction is that it achieves a narrow silhouette, but is roomy enough for ease and comfort," added Dittrich.

There's news in mink, with knockout colors such as "grey flannel," "tweed wheat" and "snow top." Exotics include tanuki, a Japanese variety of raccoon and zorina, a black and white stripe fur from Argentina (we would call it skunk).

There's an emphasis on lighter, brighter colors, such as the "cinnamon look," a color which appears in flattering tanuki and cat lynx. Raccoon becomes one of the season's new luxury furs in the hands of Chloe. Rich, glistening "snow-pelted" pelts are turned into luxurious great coats and jackets with such features as super patch pockets and over-sized notched collars.

Hoods are important, emphasizing the wrap-up, casual, confident chic of the collection. Long shawl collars are back. The long slim double-breasted coat with notched collar is a flatterer for all. The stroller length is important because it is the perfect companion to pants.
