Lobby registration bill draws fire

A proposed state law which would require legislative lobbyists who spend more than $1,000 a year in their lob-bying activities to register and file complete financial statements contin-ues to catch heat from the state's busiues to catch heat from the state's business sector.

Opponents of the proposed lobby reform bill; at a special meeting of the Michigan Senate Judiciary Committee in Detroit, said the bill is unconstitutional and would bury lobbying firms and their lobbyists under a "bilizzard of paperwork."
Opponents echoed the December testimony of George Bushnell, past presitimony of George Bushnell, past president of the State Bar Association, saying the reform bill, SB 674, sponsored by Sen. Gary Corbin (D-Clio), would prevent the state's smaller organizations from having any real input into government. They said these smaller groups would be swept under, by the time and expense demanded by the time and expense demanded by the extensive fliekeeping and reporting described in the bill.

THE BILL would require:

*Registration of all lobbytsts who spend $1,000 or more to lobby a year.

*Quarterly reporting of all expenditures.

•An itemized listing of all purchases of food and beverages for public offi-cials, if the value is more than $1.

BUSINESS representatives said the bill would also cut the free slow of information and technical advice to the legislature.

Gordon 'Tray, a lobbyist for the Greater Detroit Chamber os Commerce, said, "You need more information, more input, more technical sasistance, not less."

He said lobbyists mov offering that kind of assistance would be unwilling to do so." If they would be required to make the commerce of the said lobbyists provided the property of the commerce of the said in the John Burns, general counsel for the Michgan Manufacturers' Association, raised a familiar objection. "The bill." he said, "assumes that lobbytists are essentially corrupting and that public officials are essentially corrupting and that public officials are essentially corrupting.

MORLEY Winegrad, chairman of the Michigan Democratic Party, said. "What was possible for Richard Nixon is possible for other elected office holders." "Before Watergate, the lobby reform bill would have been desirable—mow it is essential." He said. He said the existence of a "shadow government of lobbyists" has been confirmed by the staunch opposition of some members of the business sector. Winograd said the bill would make lobbying open to public irropection and would help to restore public confidence in government. Winograd met some unexpected hostility from Sen. Besil Brown (D- Highland Park), chairman of the judiciary committee. "I don't see any connection between this bill and Watergate." Brown said.

He continued. "It is illegal for lobbyists to buy votes. Those that are dishonest will continue to be dishonest. In on't feel this bill will be very effective."

The apparent lack of support by the committee chairman casts some doubt on be face of the entire lobby reform package.
