Art for all ages offered in center

For parents who have a child who constantly has a crayon or a paint brush in hand, the Farmington Community Center offers classes this month for all age groups.

Art instructor Jackie Melissas has Art instructor Jackie Melissas has a Tuesday "Mothers and Tols" class beginning Jan. 24. The class is an introduction to creative expression through the combined efforts of mothers and teacher. Mothers and their children paint, cut, paste, model and construct together in an atmos-phere with no concern for messes.

Ms. Meliassas also has Saturday classes, beginning Jan. 28, for children from five to seven years, and for those from eight to 11 years. These classes focus on heightening awareness, building self confidence and developing individual imagination.

Media will include both two and three dimension, such as sand casting, baker's dough, batkling, and a draw-ing-design-painting project which aims to foster great satisfaction in the indi-vidual artists.

Junior high students are invited to register for Farmington Artists' Club member Joyce King's drawing and painting class which runs on Wednes-days, beginning Jan. 25.

Color, perspective and composition will be stressed, along with the special skills and methods used in painting on

The center is taking registrations now, by calling 477-8404.
