Moral perspectives

News can be inspirational

Will Rogers observed once that the material for his shows came directly from the newspapers. "All I know." he said, "is what I read in the newspapers."
For many of us the newspapers and magazines, the radio and TV, serves us in the same way. Something more than story tellers or news announcements, they also make up a great don't what we know about tile and how to of what we know about tile and how to

THERE HAVE BEEN two stories in the past several months that are exceptionaly important models for our life and living, and it is important that we take note of them.

When President Sadat of Egypt trav-eled to Israel and addressed the lead-ers of the Israeli government and the Dearborn couple traveled to California to visit the murderer of their daughter and stated their forgiveness, the world was gif two specific patterns for life that could change our living significantly.

The cymic and skeptic will find all the cymic and skeptic will find all one of the cymic and skeptic will find the stories or to deny their walfdly for you and me. We have learned to do this so as to handle the kind of news stories we bear.

BUT THAT WILL BE our loss, and hopefully, we will recognize that part of what we "see" in all that we read is greatly determined by what we are.

Few of us have been prepared to act as a president of a nation calling on the president of the arch enemy to work for peace. And very few are parents of a murder victim calling on their offspring's murderer with forpiveness.

Both stories are more than stories. They are the way that we can put together a specific file sequence that will open minds and hearts to the highest furnan accomplishment and accomplishment and accomplishment and the sequence of the sequ
