

Frog in winter

This giant snowy frog took second place last week in Lawrence Institute of Technology's snow sculpture contest for the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity. First place went to a sculpture of a 12-foot banana being peeled by a pair of giant hands. The sculpture was designed by Jim Charnesky of Southfield and built by electrical engineering students at the school. The sculptures, barring a heat wave, are still on display at the campus on Ten Mile west of Northwestern Highway. (Staff photo by Gary Friedman)

New Frontier days dramatized

Included during the seventh annual Purdy Theatre Festival will be the "Detroit Youththeatre presentation, 'The Road To Camelot.' The Story of John F. Kennedy."

Artists show paintings

Three Farmington area artists will display their work in the 19th annual Mid-Michigan Exhibition at the Midland Center for the Arts.

They are: Pamela Freund of Farmington, Joseph Zajac of Farmington Hills and Ted Striewski of Farmington Hills.

The exhibition is sponsored by the Midland Art Council. More than 800 entries were received for the show. Of these, 177 pieces were chosen. Winners received $1,500 in prize awards.

The exhibition is on display through Feb. 14 at the Midland Center for the Arts, 1801 W. St. Andrews, Midland.

chosen to represent Michigan's contribution of live, professional performing arts for young people.

Offering 34 different performing arts activities each season October through May, Detroit Youththeatre has become the nation's largest center of professional offerings for students, their teachers and families. It now boasts an audience of close to 500,000 annually.

YOUTHTEATRE PRESENTS its series of musicals, plays, concerts and films in the Detroit Institute of Arts auditorium for the public on Saturdays and in communities throughout the state on weekdays. Where cultural and economic need exist, funding for statewide performances is often provided by the Michigan State Legislature.

While weekday performances of "The Road To Camelot" are designed as a field trip for area students, grades 5-9, the March 18, 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., performances will be open to the public.

FOR FURTHER information with regard to the Purdy Festival, call 224-1196. Tickets for the Youththeatre's March 18 performances of "Camelot."

priced for children and adults, are available at the Detroit Institute of Arts ticket office. Children under five years of age will not be admitted.

Student teacher works in England

Terrance Elliot of Farmington, a Central Michigan University senior, spent eight weeks teaching history in England, last fall.

Elliot was one of 22 CMU students who taught in Southampton, England. The program is one of three alternative student teaching programs offered by the Mt. Pleasant based school. In addition to teaching in England, students can choose to work in Central America, Belgium, Amsterdam, with Navajo children in Las Vegas, New Mexico, with migrant children in Florida or children in the Appalachians of North Carolina.
