Louise Stewart named DAR 'Good Citizen'

Farmington resident Louise Stewart was chosen as Clarenceville High School's Good Citizen by the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR). The award was given at the DAR's American History Month observance.

Miss Stewart was recognized by the John Sackett Chapter DAR. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gilbert, the teenager follows in the footsteps of her older sister who was recognized in the past by the organization for her good citizenship.

Miss Stewart is the editor of her school's yearbook and president of Clarenceville High School Student Congress.

She has been in the honor society for two years, is in the school band and is a member of the tennis and varsity club.

She plans to attend Mercy College of Detroit to study dietetics, with the hope of working with low income family budgeting and food planning.

Nursery school speaker makes library come alive

Farmington Librarian Jill Locke will speak on "Making Library Materials Come Alive," at 8 p.m. March 6 in the Nardin Park Community Nursery School.

The program will focus on the use of a children's library and on techniques for making library materials interesting to children.

Miss Locke, who is head librarian at the Farmington branch of the Farmington Community Library, coordinates children's activities program by the library for members of the public. She recently won the Fyn Award as Outstanding Young Librarian of Michigan for 1977.

She studied at Brigham Young University, and serves on committees for both the Michigan Library Association and the American Library Association. Her discussion March 6 will focus on story telling and the use of non-fiction materials. She will also illustrate the relationship between library materials and a child's introduction to crafts, creative dynamics and music.

The program, which is open to the public, is sponsored by the school at 28887 Eleven Mile near Middlebelt.
